BANDIT SUSPECT KILLED

Today

Sympathy for Cuba.
A Happy Family Celebration, Two Kinds.
Mild Politics.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 12.

The world sympathizes with Cuba in her terrible disaster. Nothing more dramatically tragic could be imagined than a wall of water twenty feet high, rolling in from the sea, driven by a great wind, killing more than a thousand and drowning out one entire village.

The disaster that overwhelms but does not discourage our friendly sister republic, comes home to every human being, for no coast line is free from such danger.

The marvel is that oceans, with water enough to cover the earth one mile deep, should be dangerously disturbed so seldom, so rarely overflowing its boundaries.

YESTERDAY MORNING was spent by the writer traveling through southern territory with its beautiful cities, warm air, blue sky, clear sunlight, fine fertile country. In the fields men were ploughing down cotton plants, preparing for more.

Here and there was a cotton field not picked. The wonder is that men can pick cotton for its present price, much less plough it, care for it, bale it and ship it.

It is fortunate for the world that the cultivator of the soil refuses to be discouraged.

The cotton speculator or northern ignoramus may ask:

"Why doesn't the South plant something else?"

Advice is easy. Plant WHAT else?

If other crops were planted, where and how would they be sold?

At least cotton can be kept, not for a few months only like potatoes, or apples, but for years.

Some day those that plant cotton will combine for their own protection, find a way to finance their protection, and get a fair price for their crop.

HAPPINESS IS rare, and in any form delightful. It was visible through the window of the Seaboard Air Line Pullman car in which this was written, just north of Columbia, South Carolina.

Alone on a wide expanse of land, amid beautiful, big trees, fertile soil, no fences, brilliant sunshine, a black sow was grubbing in the earth, with nine little red pigs grubbing around her, not one as big as their mother's head.

There was complete freedom, no worry. If the mother pig could speak English she might well recite Lovelace's lines about "Stone walls do not a prison make."

You may say:

"Yes, but they must die when the butcher comes."

True, but so must we. And they die quickly, almost painlessly, more fortunate than ourselves, less kindly treated by the old butcher—death.

YESTERDAY THE world in various ways celebrated the Armistice that ended the big war fourteen years ago. This country had more than its share of that war, for which it was not responsible. It sent three million men. Heaven knows how many billions of dollars, including ten thousand millions lent, that will not come back.

Here we celebrated with speeches. That's our habit. We celebrate everything with speeches, and shall probably celebrate the end of our depression with speeches. A little thinking, with less talking, might make the end come more quickly.

EUROPE CELEBRATED with assorted announcements that it can't or won't pay what it borrowed.

The British say they have no idea of defaulting or repudiating, but they don't want to pay just now the ninety-five millions due December fifteenth.

Greece has already defaulted on a modest payment of less than half a million, part of a twenty-year loan made in 1929.

Hungary sends word it cannot pay.

"Practical common sense" marks Europe's way of celebrating Armistice Day, although the method is not amusing for the United States.

Perhaps we shall know better next time, know enough to keep out of a war, not our own, and not to scatter our billions like 123,000,000 drunken sailors.

IN POLITICS you learn that Gov. Roosevelt and President Hoover have no thought of meeting to discuss national welfare. That was a false alarm.

Gov. Roosevelt will continue his job as Governor until his term expires, and announce no cabinet appointments until after Christmas.

President Hoover, returning to Washington, will "carry out his policies energetically until March 4."

American business and industry will have plenty of time to wonder what Gov. Roosevelt's policies will be.

THE DEMOCRATIC party certainly has the opportunity of its long and respectable lifetime at this moment. Congress is overwhelmingly Democratic and the tidal wave should give Gov. Roosevelt great authority.

Almost all the forty-eight states are in the hands of Democrats. If Democrats know how to end the depression, now is their time.

Mt. Lebanon Maids' Party Raided

12 ACCUSED IN HOME LOOTING

Jewelry and Clothing Found in Auto; Owners Away

Four Mt. Lebanon maids and eight of their boy friends will be given hearings on theft charges as soon as five or six other boys are taken into custody, Chief William Kane, of the Mt. Lebanon Police Department, said today.

The eight arrested youths were accused, police said, of rifling the home of A. C. Matter, 105 Englewood drive, Beverly Heights, Mt. Lebanon, of jewelry and clothing valued at approximately $600. Joan Vodvark, 16, one of the maids held, is an employe in the Matter home, police said.

The arrests followed a party there last night while the family was out of town. The party progressed smoothly until one of the maids said she missed $2. An argument that followed attracted neighbors, who called police.

Miss Vodvark's guests were Mary Matty, 19; Laura Evans, 20; Mary Mlacnik, 19, and Martini Hahn, 20, all maids in nearby homes. The boy friends, police records show, are Thomas Evans, 23; Frank King, 23; John Crowley, 21; Albert Wood, 18; Thomas Connors, 20; Richard Lesant, 19; Edward Hamilton, 18, and James Cipriani, 19.

COOPERATION PLEDGED BY HOOVER

Must Work Together For Recovery, He Asserts

WITH PRESIDENT HOOVER EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON AT GLENDALE, Cal., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—President Hoover broke his return journey to the White House today with a speech here pledging co-operation to continue economic recovery.

Speaking from the rear platform of his train, the Executive said:

"If we are to continue the recovery so evidently in process during the past few months by overcoming the many difficulties which still confront us, we must have continued unity in constructive action all along the economic front.

PLEDGES UNITY

"I shall work for that unity during the remaining four months of this administration. Furthermore, it is our duty after the fourth of March to co-operate with our opponents in every sound measure for the restoration of prosperity."

Mr. Hoover declared he was returning early to Washington from his home in Palo Alto, Cal., "in

Police questioning in Carrick station's cell-room for Suspect Jedlick, 2933 Brentwood avenue, captured as two patrolmen, pursued, battled two suspicious men they saw fleeing from the Carrick carbarns. One was killed, a patrolman wounded. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Police Captive In Fatal Battle

PATROLMAN WOUNDED IN CARRICK CHASE

Carbarn Holdup Fails, Dead Man's Pal Captured

A bandit suspect was shot and killed early today in a pistol battle with two policemen who pursued him and an alleged companion as they fled from the Carrick barns of the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

One of the pursuing officers was shot and seriously wounded. A bullet passed through the clothing of the other.

The dead man was said to be Elmer (Red) McCorkle, 35, of 401 East Bellcrest street, Brentwood.

The wounded officer is Patrolman Howard Feidler, 33, of 1920 Westmont street, Carrick. He is in Mercy Hospital, a bullet wound in his left leg and side. His condition was described as serious.

Patrolman George Stone, 29, of 738 Warrington avenue, narrowly escaped injury. A bullet passed through his slicker and ripped through a button on his service uniform.

RAILWAY WORKER

McCorkle was identified by a Pittsburgh Railways Company pass card as an extra street car operator.

His alleged companion, F. A. Jedlick, 29, of 2933 Brentwood avenue, Carrick, was under arrest in South Side Police Station on a charge of being a suspicious person. He was held over at the hearing today. Jedlick is a brother-in-law of McCorkle, according to police.

Patrolman Stone said that he and Feidler, whose beats cross at Brownsville road and Minooka street, Carrick, had started down the road to investigate a complaint when they saw the two men run from the car barns.

Pursuing them to a hillside back of the barns, Stone overtook Jedlick while Feidler dashed after McCorkle. Feidler, recognizing the fugitive, yelled:

"Don't run, Red, I know you."

The fleeing man turned and fired four shots. Two of the bullets hit Feidler, another ripped through the clothing of Stone, while the fourth went wild.

CONTINUES BATTLE

Firing two bullets at the fugitive, Feidler yelled to his partner:

"I'm shot."

He staggered away as Stone, without loosening his grasp on his prisoner, opened fire.

The wounded policeman made his way to the Steel and Moore Restaurant, at 1120 Brownsville road, where he attracted attention by rapping on the window with his pistol.

Several men, including Harold Mulholland, of 149 Catskill avenue, a radio entertainer, ran to Feidler's assistance. They summoned Carrick police who took him to South Side Hospital. He was later removed to Mercy Hospital.

While an ambulance came for Feidler, Mulholland and John Moore ran to the aid of Stone.

Examination of McCorkle's body at the Morgue revealed that he had been shot three times, once in the head, chest and right side. He had 7 cents, a watch and a car pass on his person. Police said they also found his gun, a .32-caliber revolver with four empty shells.

MILK PRICE CUT 2 CENTS HERE

A reduction of two cents per quart in the delivered price of milk was announced today by several independent milk distributors. The new price of milk in stores will be seven cents per quart, it was said.

The price cuts are the result of an agreement between producers and distributors, dealers said, following protracted conferences. Officials of the Dairyman's Co-operative Sales Association, representing the milk producers, issued no statement announcing the price reductions, however.

Independent companies indicated they would meet the price cuts.

The new prices will be effective today, two of the largest companies said. Others indicated they would follow suit by Monday.

The old price has prevailed about three months. Recent conferences of milk producers and distributors, in which price cuts were proposed because of overproduction, ended in a deadlock Thursday.

Officer and Boy Shot In Battle Near Uniontown

By J. G. SHRADLE
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 12.—A shot believed meant for his son-in-law and fired into a group of three men and four boys on an adjoining farm started a quick-moving three-hour drama near Fayette City that today had cost the life of William Lynch, 73, a farmer, and probably that of a state trooper. A 10-year-old boy was recovering from a wound.

A gun battle in which tear gas bombs were used within the Lynch farmhouse on the Lynch Hill road, a short distance from the Fayette City-Connellsville road, ended as Corp. William Hanna fired wildly at the aged man after Lynch was said to have tricked police into believing he would surrender. As Lynch came from a bedroom in which he had barricaded himself, police say he quickly fired at Hanna. The trooper, with a bullet through his shoulder and neck, returned the fire. Lynch was killed by a bullet through his chest.

While Hanna, in Monessen-Charleroi Hospital, was not ex-

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 12.—Pitt and Nebraska resume gridiron relations in Memorial Stadium here today and the renewal will be witnessed by a turnout of 30,000 hardy souls, who'll brave the cold and snow to watch the Huskers in their big effort of the year, the effort they've been priming themselves for since last Thanksgiving Day.

Today's clash between the unbeaten Panthers, out in front in the race for national and eastern championship honors, and the Huskers is the seventh in history. Pitt has won three of the half dozen games played to date tied two and lost one. The Panthers never have lost here in Lincoln.

The Panthers enter today's game the favorites, on the basis of their record for the season and on their past performances against the locals. Pitt is the smarter team, has the most at stake, and

SNOW, COLDER WEATHER DUE

The season's coldest weather today sent the mercury to 28, with a general freeze throughout the district and first appearance of snow.

Tonight, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted, the mercury will fall to 25, with little prospect of abatement of the cold for 48 hours. He warned motorists to protect radiators against freezing.

The cold wave envelopes virtually the entire country, Brotzman said. Snowfall here will be light, he asserted, with likelihood that the skies will partly clear tomorrow.

TRAIN HITS CAR, HOSTESS SAFE

Presence of mind saved the lives of Irene Denniston, 22, Homestead night club hostess, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Denniston, 60, early today when their automobile stalled on the McClure avenue crossing of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, Homestead.

They were returning to their home, 212 Quincy street, Mt. Oliver, from the Club Mirador. Their car was on the tracks when the headlight of the approaching engine revealed their danger. Unable to move the car, Miss Denniston quickly opened the door, leaped out and helped her mother to the side as the engine demolished their machine. Miss Denniston suffered an injured hip. Her mother was badly shaken up. They were treated at Homestead Hospital.

Pinchot Hunting, Fails to Get Bear

HARRISBURG, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has returned from a bear hunting trip with a "bear" story.

The Governor was hunting with Adolph Mueller and Ernest Harwood, of the Game Commission, and Fish Commissioner Oliver M. Deibler in the vicinity of Laporte, Sullivan County. They ruefully admitted they did not get a bear, but added they saw three other hunting parties, each with a bear.

Blast in English Mine Kills 24 Men

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 12.—(INS.)—Twenty-four miners were killed in an explosion at the Garswood Hall colliery pit at Ashton, near Wigan, today.

Officer Prizes Button Hit by Bandit Bullet

Patrolman George Stone, of the Carrick Police Station, today placed a button among his most cherished possessions.

It was a button to his service uniform, flattened during a gun-battle a short time before daybreak with a bandit suspect, in which the alleged robber was shot and killed and his "buddy" was seriously wounded.

Stone said:

"That button goes into a frame. Every time I think I'm in hard luck, I'm going to look at it and reflect just a bit."

Stone, a member of the force nine years, added:

"I felt the bullet hit me and I thought I was shot. But I stayed on my feet so I knew I couldn't have been hurt much."

His chief regret was that he wasn't able to give aid to his partner, Patrolman Howard Feidler, after the latter had been wounded. He had his own hands full with a partner of the dead suspect.

The wounded officer is a son of John Feidler, tipstaff of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court. He is married, father of five, two of whom are seriously ill.

Flier Battles Winds In Race for Record

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 12.—(INS.)—Col. Roscoe Turner, on the east-bound dash of his coast-to-coast flight, landed at the Albuquerque airport at 6:32 a. m. today, refueled, and was on his way toward Kansas City at 6:39 a. m.

Turner met with head winds between Los Angeles and Albuquerque. Favorable weather was promised for his flight from here eastward.

He took off from the United Airport, Burbank, Cal., at 2:30 a. m., Pacific standard time, today, in an attempt to fly from Los Angeles to New York and return, 5,044 miles, in approximately 22 hours.

He also was to stop for refueling at Kansas City, Columbus and the Floyd Bennett Field, New York. He expected to remain in New York 30 minutes.

He said he hoped to average between 270 and 285 miles an hour east and about 240 miles an hour flying west. Much of the flight westward will be at dark, his scheduled arrival time being 11:52 p. m. tomorrow.

Turner's round trip flight attempt is the first since Lieut. Com. Frank Hawks set the present record June 28 and 29, 1929, of about 40 hours.

EUROPE TO DEMAND 'NEW DEAL' ON DEBTS AT WORLD PARLEY

HOLD REVISION NEEDED FOR RECOVERY

Allies Determined to Link War Payments With World Slump

By HOBART C. MONTEE
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A "new deal" on the $11,000,000,000 of war debts owed to the United States by European nations must be discussed at the forthcoming world conference on monetary and economic subjects.

The determination of European leaders that the debts shall have a place on the conference agenda is the real purpose behind the hue and cry which is now being raised on the other side of the Atlantic for revision or cancellation of the debts, in the privately expressed opinion of high administration officials here.

HOPE FOR REVISION

Foreign government leaders entertain little hope for cancellation, but they believe that if they can force an open discussion of the debts at the economic and monetary conference, and definitely link the debts up to the general world economic situation, they may obtain a material revision of the debt funding agreements now in force.

"Negotiations" to bring about this result have already started here. Both the British and the French ambassadors have called upon Secretary of State Stimson and delivered notes from their respective governments dealing with the debt situation.

The nature of both notes was shrouded in closest secrecy by State Department officials, but it was intimated they dealt not only with the debt installments due on December 15, but also with future payments. Similar representations from the Italian, Belgian and other debtor governments was anticipated. Reports from European capitals stated that all the debtor countries were working in unison in the matter.

BURDEN CITED

The British note, it was understood here, informed the American government that Great Britain is prepared to make the December 15 payment of some $95,000,000, as scheduled, but points out the difficulties of doing so. It is reported to cite the difficulties of obtaining the required amount of foreign exchange, especially in view of the recent "raid" on the pound sterling, the world-wide slackness of trade, and other factors in the general economic sphere of things. It is understood to pass the broad hint that the United States could greatly ease the whole economic situation by deferring collection of this installment for a few weeks or months.

Coupled with this is the even broader hint that unless some new arrangement can be worked out, Great Britain may be compelled to default on all future installments. The French note is believed to follow a similar tenor.

RECOVERY LINKED

This links up, by inference at least, the dislocations to the world economic structure—which the debtor governments claim are caused by the debt payments—with the principal objects for which the monetary and economic conference was called. The answer to the parallel so obviously drawn is that the debt should be discussed at the conference.

Mayor Hoan Sees City Again Famous

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Mayor Daniel Hoan, of Milwaukee, yesterday predicted that beer would make his home city famous as the Munich of America.

Here to address a conference of the National Association of State Leagues of Municipalities, the Socialist Mayor told newspapermen the name of Milwaukee and its beer would become household words if Congress "permits the manufacture of beer of sufficient alcoholic content to satisfy the people and doesn't demand too much revenue during the first few years."

Government Cost Cut Favored by Kephart

GIRARD, Pa., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—In an Armistice Day address last night, Justice John W. Kephart, of the State Supreme Court, declared that "wise laws and careful administration could lower the costs of government 25 per cent without much scaling of wages."

Justice Kephart urged his listeners to "help prevent the slightest disintegration of this nation for the honor of those who died in the World War."

special concern that the measures and instrumentalities which we have i nmotion on an entirely non-partisan basis shall continue to function vigorously and contribute their utmost."

In the crowd at the train was a group of friends in Southern California who had asked the opportunity to greet him.

After the speech, the President and Mrs. Hoover drove to the new home of their son, Herbert Hoover, Jr., at Sierra Madre. Mrs. Hoover had expressed a desire to see the newly-built home.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., and their three small children rode from Palo Alto on the special train. Allan Hoover, the President's younger son, also left the train here to return to his work in Los Angeles.

'MILITANT ACTION'

Republicans should not be discouraged by defeat, the President said, but "should at once strengthen all forms of national, state, county and precinct organization for militant action."

The party "will return to power," he said.

Mr. Hoover extended his thanks to those "who have given so freely of their time and effort in this campaign and in supporting the principles for which we stand."

HOOVER'S ADDRESS

The President said in his address:

"The majority of the people have decided to intrust the government to a new administration. The political campaign is over.

"I asked for unity of national action in the constructive measures which have been initiated during the past three years for care of distress, to protect the nation from imminent dangers, and to promote economic recovery. If we are to continue the recovery, so evidently in progress during the past few months, by overcoming the many difficulties which still confront us, we must have continued unity in constructive action all along the economic front.

"I shall work for that unity during the remaining four months of this administration. Furthermore, it is our duty after the fourth of March to co-operate with our opponents in every sound measure for the restoration of prosperity.

"I am making an early return to Washington in special concern that the measures and instrumentalities which we have in motion on an entirely non-partisan basis shall continue to function vigorously and contribute their utmost. The functioning of our government is dependent upon strong two-party organization. It is only through party organization that public questions can be properly considered and determined.

"Republicans of the country should not be discouraged by defeat. Rather they should at once strengthen all forms of national, state, county and precinct organization for militant action. True to its great traditions, whether in the majority or the minority, the Republican party should continue to give its constructive service to the country. It will return to power.

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 12.—For the second consecutive day President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt remained in bed at the Executive Mansion, suffering from a severe cold which has resulted in a slight temperature.

Dr. L. W. Gorham, the Roosevelt family physician in Albany, was expected to visit the President-elect again today. After Dr. Gorham had called at the mansion yesterday, it was announced that Mr. Roosevelt was "running a slight temperature, but that there was nothing in his chest and no infection in his throat."

When he is not sleeping, Mr. Roosevelt spends most of his time in bed reading messages of congratulations and other correspondence, and dictating answers.

BRITISH PRESS FEARS HEARST DEBT STAND

London Sees Publisher As Important Factor In Revived Issue

Universal Service.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Great Britain's speculation on the reopening of the war debt question, now sought by the government through a formal note to Washington, revolved today around President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and also in some small degree around the attitude of Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

Dispatches to London newspapers from their New York correspondents declare that Gov. Roosevelt is expected to "agree to postponement" of the December 15 instalments due from Europe, while little opposition is to be expected to a temporary moratorium extension in the "lame duck" Congress.

CONCERN EXPRESSED

Concern, however, is expressed over Mr. Hearst's attitude. The London Daily Herald, Labor newspaper, under the caption "Trouble for Roosevelt," states:

"William Randolph Hearst, the American newspaper millionaire, will exercise a powerful influence in the next administration, and will cause trouble whenever war debt revision or cancellation is mentioned."

The Washington correspondent of the Morning Post says in his cabled dispatch:

"There will undoubtedly be vicious opposition to debt reduction by the Hearst chain of papers.

"It has been suggested that William G. McAdoo might be offered the post of ambassador to Great Britain. His previous experience with and knowledge of war debts would fit him eminently for the position.

"Owing to his close friendship with Hearst, such an appointment might have a moderating influence on the policies of the newspaper magnate."

The News-Chronicle, liberal newspaper, publishes in its New York correspondent's dispatch:

"Some Republicans have expressed fears that the influence of Hearst and McAdoo may cause Mr. Roosevelt to stiffen his attitude on debts.

"There is no real ground for this belief. Roosevelt's electoral sweep is so vast that he stands in no man's debt.

"Hearst, however, is continuing to pound away at 'the European conspiracy,' headed by Britain, to force America to pay the whole cost of the war.

"But it is noticeable that recent editorials in his newspapers leave a loophole for adjustment.

"Many of Roosevelt's friends think he may insist on a debt settlement which will provide America with compensating trade advantages."

ORDER RECOUNT IN 2D WARD

While Judge James H. Gray was signing an order today authorizing a recount of the first four districts of the Second Ward in the legislative fight, at the request of the Democrats, official returns of the Election Return Board showed that the vote from these districts had wiped out the lead of the two Democratic candidates, Brennan and Friel, and defeated them.

The Return Board figures, made public today, were the first available from this district.

Until the four Second Ward districts were known, the count stood: Metzler (Rep.), 6,890; Maloney (Rep.), 6,467; Brennan (Dem.), 7,356, and Friel (Dem.), 7,235.

With the four districts added today, the count stands: Metzler, 8,473; Maloney, 7,950; Brennan, 7,567, and Friel, 7,448.

DIVA COLLECTS FROM KAHN

NEW YORK, No. 12.—(Universal.)—Everybody is happy among the principals in Mme. Lydia Lindgren's $500,000 breach-of-contract suit against Otto H. Kahn, whose philantrophies have extended to divers arts and divas.

The blonde and buxom "Swedish nightingale" swept from the Long Island City Supreme Court room yesterday with a satisfied smile as Justice Frank Adel announced the case was discontinued.

No announcement was made as to the amount of the settlement, if any. Max D. Steuer, attorney for Kahn, said:

"You'll have to see the 'Swedish nightingale' herself. She'll probably regain her voice now."

And the diva, reported to have insisted that Kahn pay to the tune of $300,000, said simply:

"I'm satisfied."

Mme. Lindgren has waged her battles through the courts for the last year, demanding payment of $160,000 she says the millionaire art patron promised her for dropping a slander suit against Julia Claussens, Metropolitan Opera star. Added demands of $340,000 brought the grand total of her claims to a round half million dollars.

DRY FILIBUSTER TALK DRAWS REBUKES

Extra Session Seen if Lame Ducks Fail to Act on Repeal

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Rumblings of a filibuster by drys to prevent a vote on beer in the Senate the short session of Congress beginning December 5, drew sharp rebukes from anti-prohibitionists as more southern congressmen came out for modification.

That the House will pass a bill legalizing beer shortly after the "lame duck" session begins was considered certain, but implied threats of a filibuster in the Senate clouded the outlook there.

The next, or Seventy-third Congress, elected Tuesday, is overwhelmingly anti-dry, and if the present Congress does not heed the mandate of the people, the job certainly will be done by the new Congress, possibly at a special session called by President Roosevelt.

ENFORCEMENT DIFFICULT

Action of many states in Tuesday's elections, repealing state prohibition laws, memorializing Congress to move for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and in electing anti-prohibition Senators, Governors and Representatives, plainly makes the task of enforcing national prohibition more difficult, Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, head of the federal prohibition bureau, admitted.

Woodcock, however, gave notice his organization would not let up in its efforts to enforce the Volstead act. He said that in states which have repealed prohibition laws there are other state laws, such as those against conspiracies to maintain nuisances, which can be invoked.

EXPECTS ACTION

Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, said he expects action to be taken on beer at the December session. Senator Hiram Bingham (Rep.), of Connecticut, said he construed a statement by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, dry leader, that no such action was likely as an implied threat of filibuster.

Representative John McDuffie, of Alabama, Democratic House whip, said:

"The first thing for Congress to do is to modify the Volstead act for economic reasons and turn money from the speakeasies into the treasury."

Happy Daze Here Again, Is the New Song of the Suds

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Wets now threaten to make beer-drinking compulsory.

If you don't stagger you will be fined three dollars.

We might as well go the opposite extreme and teach the drys a lesson.

Wets don't claim that repeal will empty the jails. But they do insist it will fill 'em with a better class of prisoners.

They're going easy on the promises. Two beer trucks in every garage by Christmas.

The drys are brushing up on their mid-victorian temperance lectures. But they ain't going to be so violent. They haven't forgotten that they talked themselves off the lecture platform in 1920.

There will also be a big demand for horrible examples. There will be one on every rostrum telling the audience how he signed the pledge, straightened out, started all over again, became a new man and capitalized a red nose.

We're back where we started. Happy daze here again!

Johnson, in Comeback, Shuns Milking Jousts

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Magnus Johnson said today his re-entry into official life was the harbinger of a new national third party rather than an indication that congressional life would once more be enlivened with milking contests.

Johnson, former United States senator, was elected with three other Minnesota Farmer-Labor candidates, to Congress as representative last Tuesday. He said:

"The foundation for a new national party has been laid.

"In very few years the Republican and Democratic parties will no longer monopolize the field, for a new group is rising through which workers of the farm and cities will find an outlet."

When Johnson was a member of the Senate he boasted he was its only "real dirt farmer," and challenged anyone in Washington to a milking contest. Twice he was beaten, once by the late Henry C. Wallace, of Iowa, then Secretary of Agriculture.

But when Johnson returns to Waashington there will be no more milking contests. He explained he regarded the contests as "good fun" but that "many people refused to take me seriously because of them."

Hero Listed as Deserter Given Tardy Tribute

CLINTON, Mass., Nov. 12.(AP.)—The soldiers' monument in Clinton had been re-dedicated today to include the name of William F. Kittredge, who was listed on the company roll as a "deserter" when his outfit returned from France.

The soldier's sister, Mrs. Hannah Philbin, refused to believe her brother had deserted. She kept the case before War Department officials through correspondence, and several years ago a French farmer, reclaiming a portion of a battlefield, unearthed a body, which was identified through the tag as that of Kittredge.

Another search of the records disclosed the man was with his unit when it went into action on that field. The War Department records were changed to "killed in action" and the man was given a soldier's burial.

The James R. Kirby Post, American Legion, took up a subscription, and Kittredge's name was added to the honor roll on the monument at the exercises yesterday.

WALKER ON WAY TO PARIS TO GET DIVORCE, FRIENDS HINT

ACTRESS VISITS JIMMY ON LINER

Ex-Mayor's Wife Says She 'Knows Nothing' Of N. Y. Rumors

Universal Service.

ABOARD S. S. CONTE GRANDE, Nov. 12.—Former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, who sailed Thursday night en route to India to visit the Maharajah of Mysore, today kept to the seclusion of his cabin, apparently ill.

Ship's officers dropped their insistence that Walker is not aboard and freely admitted he had booked passage and slipped into his cabin to avoid publicity.

Walker, usually a keen participant in deck games, did not appear when other first-class passengers organized shuffleboard contests.

VISITED BY ACTRESS

Betty Compton, New York musical comedy actress, also a passenger on the Conte Grande, took part in the shuffleboard and then romped on deck with her Aberdeen puppy. When Walker's valet, Greenhouse, handed her a radio message she went below for a few minutes.

Later she and her mother, Mrs. Florence Compton, visited the former Mayor. Deck chairs for Miss Compton and her mother had been reserved in the name of "Mrs. Alice Leary."

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(Universal.)—Though it was reported here that former Mayor Walker, who sailed for Europe on the Conte Grande Thursday, intends to go to India, close friends scoffed at the suggestion and said his real destination is Paris.

DIVORCE RUMORS

State Senator John A. Hastings, an intimate of the former Mayor, said that Walker will be in Paris "a long time."

While associates professed to have no direct word from him on the subject, several intimated that Walker and Mrs. Walker had reached an agreement that he seek a divorce in Paris, Mrs. Walker to receive a generous financial settlement. The couple would continue on friendly terms, friends said, even though a divorce parted them.

From Miami, Mrs. Walker, told of the divorce rumors, was quoted as saying:

"I know nothing about it.

"I expect to rent a home at Miami Beach for the winter and have absolutely retired from public life."

WOMAN 'PUT ON SPOT,' SLAIN

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 12. —(INS.)—Lead from a gangster's machine gun today killed Mrs. Pasqualina C. Miranda and wounded her companion, Michael Fiore, as they were sitting in a parked automobile. She was the first woman ever "put on the spot" in Massachusetts.

Eleven years ago Mrs. Miranda's first husband, Carlo Sinischalchi, an alleged bootlegger, was "bumped off."

The killers of Mrs. Miranda sped away in the sedan from which, behind drawn curtains, they had let loose a hail of bullets.

Police expressed the belief that a "racket" was the motive for the shooting, although they refused to reveal the kind of "racket" they suspected.

Since her first husband was killed, according to police, Mrs. Miranda had been considered an "advisor" to those arrested on liquor charges.

PASTOR GONE 3 DAYS, RETURNS

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 12.— The Rev. Sigismund Laky, 45, pastor of the Hungarian Reformed Evangelical Church, missing since Wednesday, returned home today. He told police he had wandered to Pittsburgh, then to Trenton, N. J., remembering little of what had happened.

The minister disappeared after receiving a letter from the Mahoning Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, having jurisdiction over his congregation, upholding the congregation in cutting his pay and eliminating his wife's salary of $100 a month as organist. He had refused to seat a treasurer elected by the congregation, as a result of the controversy, it was said.

Pittsburgh police yesterday were asked to aid in search for the Rev. Laky.

TROOPS CALLED IN GENEVA STRIKE

'Peace Capital' Fears More Bloodshed in Political Turmoil

GENEVA, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—A 24-hour general strike protesting the deaths of 10 persons in this week's riot went into effect in this international "peace capital" today, while troops were mobilized as a precaution against renewed violence.

The strike was part of a demonstration of protest organized by Socialists as an aftermath of the machine gunning of a political demonstration Wednesday.

One of the soldiers who fired on Socialist meeting hall was slain by the mob in that disorder.

The State Council considered the emergency early today and ordered the third infantry regiment, regularly on duty here, and the Landwehr battalion mobilized.

The trade union called the strike on the vote of the syndical union, 87 to 58, with 95 syndical delegates abstaining from voting.

The Swiss Socialist party also declared today a day of mourning for the slain.

Only the street railway employes voted not to respond to the strike call and even so, cars were not moving on schedule.

There was no sign of disorder, but the populace was considerably excited over the Socialist action.

Military precautions were also taken at Lausanne, nearby, and Berne, although the strike order was effective only in the canton of Geneva. A federal edict from Berne placed all offenders against military force in Geneva under jurisdiction of military courts.

HOLDUP WEAPON CLOTHESPIN

Richard Thompson, 23, of 314 Lawn street, alleged chain store "repeat" robber, used a clothespin in holding up a P. H. Butler store at 1518 Forbes street recently, he testified in Central Police Court today.

Thompson and his alleged accomplice, John Garvey, 29, of 605 Ridge avenue, wounded following holdup of a store at 1103 Wylie avenue October 19, were held for court on robbery charges by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg.

Thompson and Garvey invariably returned to the scene of their holdups for a second robbery, detectives said. Samuel Kaufman, manager of the Forbes street Butler store, testified he had been held up 20 times in the last few years. He said:

"Every time a stranger comes into the store I raise my hands."

pected to live, the victim of the shot that started the series of events, Samuel Kent, Jr., 10, of Elko, was recovering from a wound in the right hip.

District Attorney Wade K. Newell questioned witnesses early today to patch the various angles into a connected story. He said it was learned Lynch had been drinking for several weeks and was intoxicated yesterday. A loan of $210 to his son-in-law, Jacob Cross, a deputy game warden, of Red Lion, and which he had been unable to collect, according to Newell, started the shooting.

Cross returned from a hunting trip to the home of his brother, Constable E. L. Cross, who lives directly across the road from the Lynch farm, late yesterday afternoon. The brothers, with Samuel Kent, Sr., were examining rabbits shot during their hunt in front of the house. The four boys, Glenn, 10, and James Cross, 6, sons of Constable Cross, and Samuel, Jr., and William Kent, 12, were in the group.

FIRES INTO CROWD

Lynch is said to have stepped to the front porch of his home with a high-powered rifle and fired a distance of 150 yards into the crowd. The bullet struck the younger Kent boy. After the boy had been taken to the hospital, Jacob Cross swore out a felonious assault and battery warrant against Lynch before Justice of the Peace Edward Brakewells, of Fair Oaks. Constable John Perri, of Bellevernon, with Constable Cross, was unable to serve it.

While the warrant was being obtained, James Isle, with his wife and three children, who lived with Lynch, fled to a wash house behind the dwelling. The parents, with June, 5; Betty, 6, and Evelyn, 8, remained barricaded in the small building until state police arrived after a call from Perri.

Corp. Hanna, accompanied by Troopers Howard O'Donnell and Joseph A. Hoffer, found the farmer barricaded in a first floor bedroom adjoining the kitchen. Hanna tried for a half hour, according to the district attorney, to persuade Lynch to surrender. Wall Lynch, a son, also pleaded with his father who replied:

"You get your head out of there or I'll blow it off."

When Lynch finally agreed to surrender with the promise not to shoot, Newell said the farmer had barely opened the door when he suddenly shot.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 12. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I advised 'em all to go fishing, let the people alone to make up their own minds. Jack Garner, the only one that listened to me, went fishing, made no enemies, had a good time, caught three big "channell cats," a seat in the House of Representatives, and the Vice Presidency.

Will Rogers

That's about a record for one catch. He wanted to throw back the smallest of the "cat fish" and the Vice Presidency, and just keep the seat in the House and the other two fish. Garner will be the only man that ever went from "speaker" in the House to "listener" in the Senate.

Yours, WILL.

P. S.—By the way, whatever becomes of the Roosevelts that claimed they was only eighth cousins to this one?

Scores were arrested in the melee, during which the police made several baton charges.

STORM RESCUE PLEA REFUSED, CUBAN SAYS

Charges Rail Official, Failing to Get Cash, Left Many to Die

By CLIFFORD GALLOWAY
International News Service.

HAVANA, Nov. 12.—Santa Cruz Del Sur, little fishing and sugar plantation town on Cuba's southeastern coast, was a levelled cemetery today.

With 300 of its former inhabitants already buried, government and private relief workers searched among the ruins of the town, wiped out by Wednesday's hurricane and tidal wave, for further bodies.

MASS CREMATION

These they placed in huge piles, to be soaked with oil and then burned. Bodies of drowned and crushed victims were being uncovered by the hundreds, while many more inhabitants of the defenseless little town were believed to have been carried out to sea as the wave receded.

The exact toll never will be known. Estimates ranged from 400 to over 1,500. Eloy Garcia Figueroa, secretary to Martinez Barcena, member of the House of Representatives, who was drowned, said he believed deaths would not exceed 800. Property damage was expected to exceed $5,000,000.

Garcia Figueroa was the first survivor of the disaster to reach the outside world, and it was he who first told of the scenes of death and destruction left in the hurricane's wake at Santa Cruz. After telling his first story he collapsed, satisfied to have set relief machinery in motion for his stricken fellow citizens.

CHARGES FILED

Today, however, he filed with the Ministry of the Interior the startling charge that many of the Santa Cruz victims might have been saved but for the reported refusal of rural guards and the railroad stationmaster to evacuate citizens on empty freight cars.

Garcia Figuero said he and other citizens asked the stationmaster to use the cars, which were standing nearby, at 7:35 a. m. Wednesday, when the water already was 11 feet deep in the streets of the town.

He accused the stationmaster, who, he said, was upheld by rural guards, of demanding payment before consenting to aid the panic-stricken inhabitants. A few hours later the town was completely wiped out.

Mayor Antonio Martinez Valle, of Santa Cruz, was reported to have shot himself when he saw other members of his family drowned. A policeman also committed suicide.

BISHOP URGES RELIEF AID

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Bishop James E. Freeman, a member of the committee named by President Hoover to consider the national relief problem, yesterday pronounced the call to aid in relief work "second only in importance to a call to the colors."

The Bishop's statement was issued further to center public attention upon the community chest campaigns.

Bishop of Washington stressed the non-sectarianism of the appeal "to the people of America to mobilize all their forces for the relief of the needy and the maintenance of our character-building institutions."

He said:

"While there are signs that we are slowly emerging from the deep shadows that have lowered upon our people through the past three years, we are facing a situation that calls forth from every citizen an expression of loyalty in terms of generosity that the less fortunate, or unfortunate, of our citizens shall not be denied the bare necessities of life, and that those institutions that are designed for the maintenance of the strong things of character building shall not be compelled to suspend their operations at a time when they are most sorely needed."

COURAGE MARKED CHARACTERISTIC OF NEW FIRST LADY

MRS. ROOSEVELT STRONG AIDE TO HUSBAND

Following is the third of a series of stories presenting an intimate portrait of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the new First Lady.

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.

"I am the master of my fate,
"I am the captain of my soul . . ."

Those lines from W. E. Henley's famous poem, "Invictus," are among Eleanor Roosevelt's favorite bits of poetry

And they are peculiarly appropriate for the new First Lady. She is a person who guides her own destiny. You cannot imagine her beaten by circumstances.

It was the remembrance of those lines, perhaps, which gave her the strength to encourage her husband to overcome what then seemed like the end of his public career when he was stricken with infantile paralysis after his unsuccessful campaign for the vice presidency in 1920.

STRONG CHARACTER

The fact that the President-elect has risen above his physical handicap, that he is now strong and vigorous and active in many of the sports which he enjoyed before his illness, is one of the things which impressed his strength of character upon the American people.

But his wife had a hand in his victory.

It was she who helped him to gather up the threads of his daily life when Franklin Roosevelt returned to his Hyde Park home after he had been stricken in Camp Obello, Maine.

Never, from that day to this, has Eleanor Roosevelt allowed anyone to mention his physical handicap to her husband.

Never has she admitted by a word or a look that there was anything he had done before that he could not do now.

She suggested picnics, swimming parties, horseback riding and sailing, just as she had before.

JOINS ALL OUTINGS

And if Mr. Roosevelt appeared hesitant about indulging in his old activities, she simply said:

"Nonsense, of course you're going! I'll have your horse ordered immediately, and you'll go with the rest of us."

Or—

"Certainly you're going swimming with us."

Or—

"Of course you'll go sailing. We'll all go."

So, bit by bit, Eleanor Roosevelt was able to help her husband back to the normal and natural enjoyment of life.

He realized, after a time, that he could ride horseback, that he could swim and that he could indulge his love of sailboats, just as he always had.

It was Mrs. Roosevelt who thought of a way to make it possible for her husband to drive a car, since she knew of his love of driving.

So she arranged that his car be equipped with gasoline feed and brakes that could be manipulated by hand instead of by foot, and now the President-elect drives himself whenever and wherever he pleases.

The family swimming parties and picnics at Hyde Park are most indicative of the family unity and mutual companionship which exists among the Roosevelts.

WEEK-END PICNICS

Practically every week-end throughout the summer, Mrs. Roosevelt plans some kind of family outdoor outing, often joined by some of her girl students from the Todhunter school, and practically always including her two closest friends and business partners, Miss Nancy Cook, who runs her Van Kill Furniture Factory, and Miss Marian Dickerman, who supervises her school.

The new first lady loves to cook over a camp fire, and is a skilled hand at it.

The Roosevelt picnics include no such insipid foods as made-to-order sandwiches and salads.

They go in for such "he-man" fare as scrambled eggs and hot dogs, fried potatoes and corn roasted in the ashes.

The President-elect's two favorite dishes are scrambled eggs and hot dogs. Says Miss Nancy Cook, who has been an intimate of the family for 15 years:

"I've never seen the Governor get enough scrambled eggs. And whenever we have a picnic we have to have hot dogs for him."

7 Orientals Win Seats in Hawaii

HONOLULU, T. H., Nov. 12.—(INS.)—Official returns in the territorial election showed that four Japanese and three Chinese will occupy seats for the next two years in the Hawaiian Legislature. This increases Oriental representation in the Legislature from one to seven. For the first time in history a Japanese was elected two years ago. One Japanese and one Chinese also were successful in winning posts on the County Board of Supervisors.

Faith in Future of Nation Keynote of Roosevelt Policy

Holds Magic Won't Cure Slump, Maps Own Remedies

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS
War Time Secretary of the Navy.
Written Expressly for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The keynote of the policies of the Roosevelt of this day is summed up in Faith in the future of his country by the application of sound Progressive Principles. There isn't a drachm of pessimism in his make up. Neither does Pollyannaism of seeing only the rosy side find a foothold in his attitude any more than the Wilkins Micawber waiting for "something to turn up."

The supreme thing about Roosevelt is Optimism. When he was a younger man Buoyant Optimism would be the right words to use to describe him. There is no abatement now of buoyancy, but Seasoned Optimism would fit better his outlook on America of today and tomorrow. He has firm faith that America will emerge out of the debacle because he does not think it "just happened." He thinks too much courage and too much valuable resource here for the United States to remain in the slough of despond.

Showed Causes

Because Governor Roosevelt does not think the Panic or Calamity or Depression (whatever name is given to the distressing period through which we have been passing in recent days, and over which victory is yet to be won) fell down out of the sky and could not be averted.

He does not believe it will pass away by any magic or miracle or sleight of hand. His profound conviction is that unwise and discriminating policies brought on the panic and that its ills can be driven out only by the adoption of sound principles.

Governor Roosevelt told on many occasions what brought on the era of unemployment and bank failures and railroad and business depression. It was, first of all, the entrance into Washington in 1921 of officials, all of whom believed that Government should aid the rich and powerful along the Hamiltonian plan, and by some, who later slipped out of Washington between suns, who practiced graft in large and small ways.

"Only one-third of the Cabinet was corrupt" was the defense of a Republican Senator of the Harding Administration. He was the sort of Senator who thinks ownership of 51 per cent of the stock of a corporation justifies "killings" and "watermelons" and watered stock galore. He declared the era of corruption was followed by the period of Frenzied Finance in Washington.

Stock Debacle

Roosevelt has told, with fact and figures, how encouragement by the Washington administration encouraged gambling and speculation, with full control by monopoly, resulted in the stock debacle in 1929 which wrought destruction from coast to coast. There would have been no such debacle as occurred that year if there had not been excessive issues of what he calls "phantom stock," and if the White House and Treasury had not assured the people that all was well until the explosion knocked them from the top of the tallest building into the cellar.

The collapse was increased by the lending of billions of American money in Europe and South America by international bankers who sold the securities to small banks and individuals who were left to hold the bag. To these causes business men have added and stressed the mounting public expenditures and high taxes, national appropriations being increased from $1,114,490,704.09 in 1916 to $5,026,046,098.18 in 1932. In addition the public debt was increased $3,301,692,612.43 during the Hoover administration.

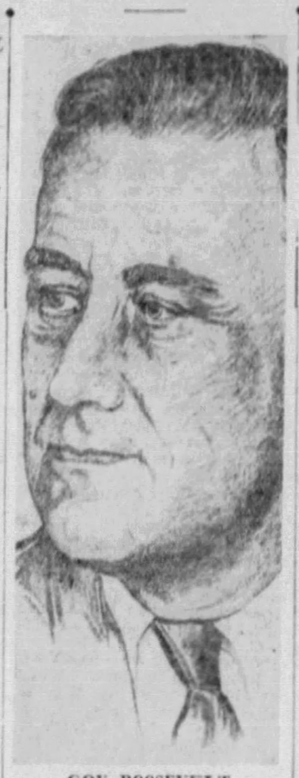
Tariff Walls

If encouragement of monopoly with subsidies and of gambling and loaning of money to nations unable or unwilling to pay had not been enough to bring great losses and break banks, the next step was taken to destroy America's best markets by raising tariff walls as high as the sky. That refusal to trade with others to mutual advantage invited retaliation.

Forty nations raised high tariff walls, Great Britain held the Ottawa conference which has further denied markets to our surplus crops. The Smoot tariff compelled American manufacturers to build branch factories abroad which employ the nationals of those countries, while many of the 2,500,000 men heretofore employed in making things to sell abroad have lost their occupations.

Here is the indictment of the Republican administration set forth in the Democratic platform, to which Mr. Roosevelt gave his "100 per cent approval":

"They (the Republican administrations) have ruined our foreign trade, destroyed the value of our commodities and products, crippled our banking system robbed millions of our people of their life-savings, and thrown millions out of work, produced widespread poverty and brought the government to a state of financial distress unprecedented in times of peace."



GOV. ROOSEVELT

His Program

The question is: What will he do as President to change the bad situation depicted? Here are some of the more important specific remedies, written in the platform and in Roosevelt's speeches:

1—An immediate 25 per cent reduction of public expenses. He promises to abolish useless commissions and offices, consolidate departments and bureaus. This means a rattling of dry bones in Washington and elsewhere.

2—A balanced Federal budget. That will be a curiosity at the national Capitol. It is to be done by a complete change in the principle of taxation that has prevailed, to wit: Tax money is to be raised "on the principle of ability to pay" rather than on consumption.

3—A sound currency "to be preserved at all hazards," with an international conference to consider the rehabilitation of silver and related questions.

4—A "competitive tariff" by barter and reciprocity—sitting down with other nations and effecting swapping that helps all. This dooms the Smoot bill and the useless Tariff Commission as now organized.

Humane Policies

5—Humane policies, such as reduction of the burdens of labor, old age insurance under state laws.

6—Navy and Army adequate for national defense. As former Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt knows perfectly the status and the needs of military establishments.

7—The "strengthening and impartial enforcement" of the anti-trust laws. The cobwebs will have to be brushed off.

8—Specific measures to protect the investing public.

9—The conservation, development and use of the national water power in the public interest, with the removal of government from all kinds of private enterprise except where necessary to develop public works and national resources in the common interest. It is safe to say that when the Norris bill to save the $10,000,000 invested in Muscle Shoals and complete it is passed by Congress there will be no White House veto.

Aid for Farmer

10—The restoration of agriculture in every way possible, including the enactment of every constructive measure that will aid the farmers to receive for their basic commodities prices in excess of cost. No more Farm Board loss of hundreds of millions with no benefit to farmers.

11—Important changes and better banking supervision, with restriction against permitting the use of Federal Reserve facilities for speculative purposes.

12—Justice and generosity for "all war veterans who have suffered disability or disease caused by or resulting from actual service in time of war and aid for their dependents."

13—The calling of conventions in the several States to submit to the people repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, with effective prevention of the return of the saloon.

14—No cancellation of foreign debts.

As to foreign policies, these will be unfolded as the days go by. Little was said of the attitude as to such questions in Governor Roosevelt's pledges, but it is safe to say he will seek to further peace and trade expansion, and agreements to reduce armament, independence for the Philippines and ultimate statehood for Porto Rico. "No politics beyond the water's edge," said Daniel Webster. That admonition was followed by Governor Roosevelt during the campaign.

Unemployment

The big problem to which the new President will address himself at once, for it is pressing, is that of unemployment. What will he do? Here are his three categories of unemployment and how to meet the problem:

"First, industry's responsibility; policies for stabilization of industry and prevention of unemployment;

"Second, economic responsibility; national and world-wide economic controls which are at present vaguely understood;

"Third, government responsibility for relief and prevention of unemployment."

The new President will go into office with a serious sense of the grave responsibilities, but will be upheld by faith in America and its people and its rich resources, confidence in the policies which he believes will restore prosperity, and with faith in the Supreme Ruler who has preserved us since we were "made a nation."

Soviet Fires 25,000 'White Collar' Men

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Soviet Russia began a campaign to purge the government of excessive employes today with orders to discharge between 25,000 and 30,000 "white collar workers" in government departments and trusts.

NOTED FLIER Hausner Tells Of Sea Hop ON AIR HERE

3 Boswells, Price Here Tomorrow

Those three glamorous stars of radio, the Boswell Sisters, and Georgie Price, versatile mimic and gagster of the air, will be in Pittsburgh tomorrow night to head an extensive entertainment bill at the Variety Club's annual "Big Top" dinner at the William Penn Hotel . . . Whataswell show it'll be . . . and one of the guests of honor is to be none other than John Royal, vice president of the National Broadcasting Company . . . The affair is tendered as a testimonial to James G. Balmer and associate outgoing officers.

Mr. Price

Through last-minute arrangements, the Southern Harmony Trio will present a 15-minute program from the studios of KDKA tomorrow night at 9:30.

Robert Ladd, of Arnold Johnson's Orchestra, is making a strong bid for a place among radio's most versatile musicians . . . In the course of a single selection on a recent Jack Smith-Hummingbirds program, "Laddy" did solo bits on three saxophones, two clarinets, a flute, a piccolo and an ocarina.

Johnny Marvin always delays the preparation of his programs until the last minute . . . in order that he may include as many request numbers as possible . . . All this because he discovered after his third week of broadcasting that an old-fashioned ballad he'd sung in response to a request has reunited a couple separated for seven years.

Gracious, Russ Columbo . . . On his own letterhead it is announced that the "battle of the baritones" will be continued this season and that "during the interim between the first and second rounds, both networks have failed to develop any stars of the magnitude of Columbo and Crosby" . . .

Reports have it that Amos 'n' Andy, who have broadcast more than 2,000 performances without a single week-end to themselves, greeted the announcement of their reduced broadcasting schedule with evident pleasure . . . Amos whistled his favorite tune, "Is I Blue?" and executed a brief shuffle with his feet . . . and Andy drew a deep breath, remarking that he'd have time now to "unlax" . . . By the way, the boys, during their three years on the air, have missed only two programs and twice have broadcast from bed against doctors' orders so that the show might go on . . .

Although Ozzie Nelson actually owns nine saxophones, he prefers to play a battered old instrument he bought for $3.50 in a pawnshop. Loyce Whiteman, the singer, is really Mrs. Harry Barris. Mildred Bailey doesn't care to sing on night club floors, but when she's dining in public places she can't resist singing softly to the folks at her table if the orchestra plays a familiar melody.

Morton Downey goes NBC after January 1, and in the meantime is planning an act for an extended vaude tour. Report that a Brooklyn humorist is annoyed because some of the better known comedians have "borrowed" jokes he's created, but all of his attempts to establish contact with the air stars to offer newer and better gags have been frustrated.

Brother to Officiate At Deasy Funeral

Requiem high mass for Robert A. Deasy, 40, who died yesterday at his home, 5242 Morningside avenue, will be celebrated by his brother, the Rev. Father Charles Deasy, Tuesday morning in St. Raphael's Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Deasy was a member of St. Raphael's Church. He was also a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and served in England with the 316th Aviation Corps during the World War.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Margaret Deasy; two children, Patritia and Robert A. Deasy, Jr.; five brothers, Father Deasy, Edward, Patrick, Jerry and Paul Deasy, and a sister, Miss Margaret Deasy. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Ships at Anchor Crash; 1 Damaged

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The Cunard liner Alaunia was slightly damaged yesterday in a collision with the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Richmond in the St. Lawrence River about 20 miles from Montreal. The Duchess of Richmond was undamaged.

Both vessels were anchored in the stream owing to a heavy fog. The Alaunia apparently swung around with the current, striking the Duchess of Richmond with sufficient force to dent her own plates.

Substitute Greeter For Chicago Named

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Mayor Anton J. Cermak feels that Chicago's hospitality can't be neglected.

He has therefore appointed George Brumlik, dance hall owner and politician, as a inch-hitter for George D. Gav official city greeter, who can't greet any notable visitors for a time because he burned his greeting hand recently while handling a tear gas gun.

WCAE Stars Greet New NBC Link

Stanislaus Feliks Hausner, celebrated Polish trans-Atlantic flier, stopping in Pittsburgh today, is scheduled to give a 15-minute talk from the studios of KDKA at 10:45 tonight.

Hausner, who made his first solo flight in 1920 and for several years was a member of the flying police corps of New York City, tells about some of his harrowing experiences in escaping a watery grave after a forced landing on the sea 150 miles off the coast of Ireland last June in an attempt to fly from New York to Poland. The noted pilot floated for eight days and seven nights, and watched a half dozen ships pass without sighting him during that time, while waiting for help.

Mr. Hausner

Sir Wilfred Grenfell, famed medical missionary whose adventures in Labrador are an epic of man's fortitude, speaks over an extensive NBC-WEAF network, of which WCAE is the local outlet, tonight at 7:15. The famous explorer and surgeon, who has been honored by the King of England and by the medical profession of two continents, was the first medical missionary to Labrador, where he built homes, hospitals, schools and organized industries.

Harlem Hot-Spot

I went last night in a mood so blue
To the hottest spot on the Avenoo,
And what I saw I can hardly say,
But "Skeedaaten, skeedooten, dum, skiddey!"

Sepia sirens and their smoky sheiks
Shivered to the saxophones' wails and shrieks.
Darktown strutters and "Lindy-hoppers"
Pulled out the corks and lost the stoppers.

"There goes Minnie! Hold that Tiger!"
They stole those rhythms from the River Niger!
I left that dive feeling too hey-hey
"Skeedee, weedee, whaa-whaa, dum—skiddey!"

Oop!

Arnold Johnson has been annoyed for some time by a lad who wanted the maestro to read a song lyric he had penned. Finally Johnson consented to inspect it, and as he finished reading it aloud, the boy whined:

"Say, you made a mistake!"

"My dear young man," was the fed-up meanie's retort: "Any mistake on that lyric is an improvement!"

Add Scallions

Charles Crosland and others were gabbing about a prominent local who has done many favors for people, but he always exacts his pound of flesh.

"He's the type of guy," summed up Crosland, "who gives you a bucket of milk—and then kicks it over!"

By Way of Report

The towners are offered this exciting bit of news, which indicates something or other. Broadway's first "beer lease" was signed the other day! Emil Aufrecht, head of the Broadway Hofbrau, Inc., signed a lease with the Loew real estate department for the basement of Loew's State Theater Bldg.

In the lease is a "beer clause," by which the rent is almost tripled in case of "a change in the prohibition laws."

Put a collar on mine.

Word-Juggling

The local lads and lassies are having jolly moments toying with wordage in sentences, again. Looka: Frank Mullahey offers: Ed Wynn The Moon Comes Ovah The Mowntin!. . . Elinson To The Mocking Bird. . . . Tommy Milo juggles Gus Edwards like this: Gus, Edwards So Beautiful, So Wonderful, etc. . . The Night When Love Osborne. . . Roxy To Sleep in my Ol' Kentucky Home. . . Downey 'mong the sugar cane. . Eli Hoffman: Oakie, America!. . . Meighan My Shadow. . . Daniel Baker: Barrymore Not on The Lone Prairie. . . Voorhees a Jolly Good Fellow. . . I hear You Colleen Me. . . Lou Ashendorf: Laemmle Carl You Sweetheart.

No Kiddin'?

"I guess," guesses Buck Davis, "that every politician in the world must be crooked. I just read in a book where Geo. Washington crossed the Delaware!"

I Dont' Believe It

Billy Glason vows he heard it in one of the Magistrates' courts here. A racketeer was up before hizzoner and the judge chirped:

"You've been in front of me a dozen times. Just what is your racket, anyway? Come on, be a good sport and give me the low-down."

"Lissen, judge," was the reply, "stick to your own—mine's lousy!"

How Exasperating!

Morton Downey was in a hurry. He sounded his horn frantically and boisterously, but the dilapidated car ahead on the narrow country road was in his way. Downey's car finally caught up in a ditch trying to make room, when Morton screamed:

"What's the matter, can't you move over?"

"No," was the indifferent reply, "some fool has built a fence here."

Just a Bum

Charles Hughes, the publisher of the Detroit Athletic Club News, has a pet gag. It deals with the time Morris Gest was enjoying his theatrical triumphs and an admirer was showering him with gush goo.

Gest had been through all this hero-worship before and was dozing during the admirer's raving.

"And when I think," continued the fan, "how you climbed to success. From a property boy to the producer of 'The Miracle.' My goodness, Mr. Gest, you're the Napoleon of the theater!"

"Good heavens, don't say that!" screamed Morris, as he came out of his trance. "Napoleon was a failure!"

I've Met Him!

"Talk about practical jokers," says I. Elinson, "I know a guy who would pull the piano away as Helen Morgan was about to sit down."

Jolson Would Live in Calif.

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12.

If California ever had an adopted son, Al Jolson is the lad.

Homesick before he even leaves here for those eight radio broadcasts, the singing comedian is working out a deal to launch them from San Francisco instead of New York. He is a great admirer of Ted Fiorito's Band and if the idea proves acceptable to the powers back east, he will work with them weekly in the Bay City.

Thursday Al was in a chaotic mood. A great racing fan, he had hung over the election returns all day, waiting to see if betting would be legalized in California. With each change in the closely fought issue, he groaned or cheered.

Al Jolson to live in California.

"But I like it out here," he exclaimed, "Pictures or no pictures I want to live in California."

Bad news, however, for local real estate men. He doesn't want to buy a house.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE

The romance between Wynne Gibson and Lyle Talbot will bear watching. They were out dancing again the other evening to Stanley Smith's music at the Biltmore Garden Room. Blonde Joan Marsh was there, too, with Tommy Lee . . . Joel McCrea is looking at ranches these days . . . And Eric Linden is personally redecorating and repairing a rambling house he has rented in the hills north of Hollywood . . Even though Carole Lombard had to replace Miriam Hopkins in that Paramount film, she still is the leading candidate for the Richard Barthelmess lead. Warners are willing to shoot around her role until she can report for work . . . Miriam Jordan, Al Rockett discovery, has just arrived here by plane from the East. She listened to election reports all the way across . . . Ralph Farnum writes from New York that he made two clubs, five cafes and two speakeasies in a single dark-to-dawn. And they say night life is slow on Broadway . . . Out at M-G-M they are talking about their first jobs. Johnny Weismuller admitted he used to deliver artificial flowers.

LLOYD VISITS LONDON

Just returned from England, Hayden Talbot tells an amusing anecdote about Harold Lloyd's visit to the English capital.

One day he undertook to show Harold the sights of the town. After a while they came to the Inner Temple on Fleet street, now a gathering place for barristers, but once the scene of Shakespeare's own production of "Macbeth."

To better explain the history of the place, the sightseers enlisted the aid of a pompous old guide, who's been on the job for 50-odd years. Resplendent in gray silk suit, purple epaulets and waxed mustache, the fellow was quite patronizing.

'Strange Interlude'

Norma Shearer is starred in the film version of Eugene O'Neil's "Strange Interlude," coming to the Aldine Theater Monday, Nov. 21.

Roosevelt in News Reel

THE GLOBE TROTTER

As President-elect of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he sends his first message to the nation. The pictures were made at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., following his election. There are also unusual and spectacular night scenes on the Great White Way where a great mass of humanity is seen and heard celebrating the victory of the Democratic ticket. Pictured, too, are scenes in the grand ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel where Roosevelt received the returns. With his election assured, the Democratic standard-bearer appears on the balcony and thanks the workers and members of the national campaign committee, and is cheered to the echo. Hearst Metrotone News is being shown in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters.

First pictures of Princess Ingrid, daughter of the Crown Prince of Sweden, are presented as she visits London, where it is reported she is engaged to either the Prince of Wales or his brother, George. The "Flying Princess" is shown with her grandfather, the Duke of Connaught, on his estate at Sidmouth.

The world's biggest ocean liner, the Normandie, is shown sliding down the ways at St. Nazaire, France. Madame Lebrun, wife of the President, smashes a bottle of champagne on the bow of the new 75,000-ton Queen of the Seas, 11,300 tons greater than her nearest rival, the Leviathan.

An amazing new airplane that actually flies itself, is demonstrated in Los Angeles. The pilot, after taking off, leaves the controls and seats himself first on the wings and then on the fuselage while the plane speeds along without human guidance.

Steeplechase racing for the season in the East comes to an end with the United Hunts meet at Belmont. Two sensational spills occur directly in front of the camera.

Uncle Sam's $500,000 project to make the Mississippi floodproof in the harbor of Memphis, is pictured. Great mats forming the foundation for layers of concrete are lowered to the river bed.

Pleasing Bill In Davis

By MARY SHINE

"The Night of June 13th" is showing on the Davis screen, where it opened yesterday. Stark tragedy, excruciating comedy, romance, besides all the homely little everyday things that make life interesting, are epitomized in the story, to make it an entertaining show.

The setting is in a little suburban town. The people chiefly concerned are all neighbors on one street, and, as neighbors usually are, they are much more interested in other people's affairs than their own. Mary Boland, the most curious, makes you laugh with just a twist of her mobile mouth or an inflection in her lilting soprano voice, and Charles Ruggles, as her henpecked husband, is his usual funny self.

The neighbors surmise this and that about the young lady across the way, played by Lila Lee, and a young husband, played by the sartorially perfect Clive Brook. We see the wife of Clive suffering from possibly losing her husband's love, until she grows mad and commits suicide.

Clive is accused of murdering his wife. Like an honorable man he has burned the "suicide note" in which Lila Lee is mentioned, and his only alibi is gone.

The court room scene is rather unusual, because there is a great deal of humor brought about in spite of the seriousness of the situation. The witnesses are all neighbors of one another. Everyone, in his statements deviates a little from the truth to conceal some little personal matter, thinking it unimportant, but in reality only sealing Clive's doom the more.

Things look black, but suddenly a new element enters the case and on come more surprise witnesses than you ever saw and—but it would be a shame to tell you what happens

Fu Manchu Not So Shivery In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Like the hero of Grimms' fairy tale, the timid scribe went to the Penn Theater yesterday to learn the cold shivers. For here was Boris Karloff, the awful monster of "Frankenstein," in a new picture full of horrors, guaranteed to make your hair stand on end "like quills from the fretful porpentine." Whether they tried "The Mask of Fu Manchu" on any porpentines out in Hollywood is not known, but something must have made the porpentines fretful.

Mr. Seibel

The scribe sat down and waited for the shivers.

There was a tarantula. There were assorted snakes, ante-Volstead variety. There were caymans, or crocodiles, or maybe plain alligators with wide-open jaws. There were all sorts of crawly and slimy things in jars, boxes and pools.

Still no shivers came down the itching spine of the scribe.

The hero was flogged, the heroine's father was subjected to the torture of the bell (as if he were an atheist who wouldn't go to church), and the heroine herself is to be sacrificed upon a high altar while a thousand shrieking yellow demonds are rooting on the side-lines.

But you know that good and wise Lewis Stone will get his hands free in time to rescue everybody, while Fu Manchu is busy making faces, ringing gongs and threatening to exterminate the entire white race—except the hero, whom he will save for his daughter, Myrna Loy, though the young man vows he loves only the platinum Karen Morley.

Stone does get free, as everybody knew he would, and lets loose all the dynamos, Leyden jars, Voltaic piles, kilowatts, amperes, induction coils, Crookes tubes, and Galvanic batteries Fu Manchu has been playing with. So all the white folks get away, and drop the sword of Genghis Khan into the Red Sea where Fu Manchu can't find it.

Regrets to Sax Rohmer, who told the tale, and Boris Karloff, who played Fu Manchu, but the shivers just would not frizzle. Pulse normal, heart action regular, hardly a goose-pimple after all these horrors—bring on your Carnegie hero medal!

Then everybody laughed consumedly at Laurel and Hardy in the "County Hospital" and out of it. Laughing must be much easier than shivering.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By MARK HELLINGER

TOM AND HENRY had grown up together. Practically the same age, they had been boon companions as far back as they could remember. They attended the same schools, lived the same life and were inseparable. It was a rare friendship for these times.

When they had completed their high school educations, Tom and Henry went into different businesses. Henry got a position in Wall street, while Tom cast his lot with a jewelry firm. The years passed. And by the time they had reached the age of 23, both boys were going fairly well in their respective lines.

In the summer of that year, it was agreed that they would spend their vacation together at a seaside resort on the Atlantic coast. They made the usual preparations and the usual plans. Just a few days before they were scheduled to leave, however, Tom was told by his firm that he would be unable to go at that time. His vacation would have to be put off until a later date.

So Henry, who was unable to change his vacation date, was compelled to go alone. It was unfortunate, but there it was. Tom went down to the train and said goodbye to his pal. It was a real goodbye, too. For Tom never saw Henry alive after that.

Henry died in a strange manner. The papers carried complete reports of it at the time. He had, it seems, taken a girl at the seaside resort for a drive. They had parked the car on a side road that was known as Lovers' Lane. A holdup man had appeared, flourished a gun, stripped a ring from the girl's finger and demanded all of Henry's money.

The boy refused to submit. He attempted to fight. The gun went off and Henry fell. By the time the girl had summoned aid, the robber was gone and Henry was dead.

There had been, of course, the customary investigation. The girl, seemingly a mental wreck, because of the unfortunate happening, was questioned and quickly cleared by local authorities. She had always resided in that seaside resort, you see, and it was very evident that a local girl could do no wrong.

The girl gave the police a description of the killer, a reward was posted and the case was closed. It was closed, that is, for every one but Tom.

At the grave of his pal, Tom swore vengeance. Not the usual dramatic stuff. There were no vigorous announcements to other people. There were no words to the papers. Just a grim promise to himself. And that was sufficient . . .

When his vacation time arrived Tom went to the same resort in which Henry had been killed. Quietly and with no attempt to communicate with the police, he began his own investigation. He had studied every angle of the case and before he left he had managed to meet the girl who had been with Henry on the fatal night. He was extremely nice to her and made no mention of the fact that he had ever known Henry.

For two long years Tom communicated with the girl at various times. He spent his following vacation at the same spot and saw her frequently at that time. And as the weeks turned into months he gradually pieced together the true story.

The girl was a racketeer and had been engaged in one of the most despicable games in the world. For several years before Henry had turned up, she had been working her racket in conjunction with another racketeer. And she had always earned very easy money.

The plan was simple. She would sit upon the beach in the afternoon and flirt with a man who looked promising. A promising man was one who was married and evidently carried plenty of money with him. She would agree to go to the theater with him at a certain time. And after theater she would suggest that he drive her into the country.

Her co-worker, of course, was waiting for her at a chosen spot. As soon as the car was parked, he would appear on the scene with his gun. The sucker would invariably come across and just as invariably make no squawk to the police. He wanted no publicity. The wife wouldn't like it.

Until Henry came along, then, everything was hotsy-totsy. The girl would grow hysterical and the sucker would never suspect her. As time went along, the girl and her companion grew bolder. It was so absurdly simple that they no longer cared whether a man was married or not. And that's how Henry had died.

Tom was sure of his facts. The girl was no longer engaged in the racket. The publicity of the shooting had killed all chances for further profit. Her co-worker had disappeared and Tom knew that he had no chance of ever finding him. So it was the girl who would be made to pay for Henry's life.

But how? Report the entire story to the police? Foolish. Nothing would come of it. He would have to settle this score by himself. He thought carefully and long. And then he made his decision . . .

Sitting on the beach with her one afternoon, he suggested a canoe ride in the ocean. She agreed. Soon they were riding the waves far beyond the life lines. Tom kept going farther and farther. The girl grew puzzled.

"You're going out too far, Tom," she cried. What's—"

She never finished that sentence. A look of horror came over her face as she saw Tom's eyes.

"You're going farther than this," he muttered. "You're going so far that you'll never come back. You're going to die, you hear?

"For two years, I've been waiting for this. Henry R—— was my best friend. You led him to his death just the same as I'm leading you to yours. I'm going to even the score."

The girl made an attempt to leap from the canoe. Tom raised the paddle and struck her a blow across the temple. The canoe turned over and both went into the water. Tom grasped her by the hair and began to swim toward shore.

But he held her head beneath the water! The blow had stunned her and the rest was easy. By the time the life saver pulled them both to the beach the girl was dead. Tom's job was over . . .

In his pocket, Tom carries a clipping. He will always carry it, I guess.

"New Yorker in Heroic Attempt to Save Girl," it reads. "Betty L——, witness in the Slaying of Henry R——, in Lovers' Lane, two years ago, was drowned in the ocean yesterday afternoon. She met her death in spite of a heroic attempt to rescue her on the part of Tom B——, a New Yorker with whom she was canoe riding when the accident took place.

"As B—— explained the accident, the canoe had suddenly overturned and the girl had struck her head on its side as she fell into the water. Although he was almost a mile from shore, he brought the girl to the beach before he collapsed. It was a remarkable feat." . . .

Warner Film Success

By EDWARD W. GOSS

Interspersed with romance, adventure and comedy, "Hat Check Girl," movie in the Warner, is good entertainment.

Ben Lyon, portraying the role of rich play boy, is particularly impressive. Sally Eilers, in the feminine lead; Ginger Rogers and Monroe Owsley do excellent work.

Sally Eilers and Ginger Rogers are co-workers in the check room of a night club. Sally meets the gay Lyon following a party, and he becomes deeply interested in her, when he discovers she is a strict adherent of the conventions. Lyon's father objects to the affair, but his objections don't alter things.

The situations encountered in "Hat Check Girl" have been used in numberless other pictures. There is a peeping Tom of a columnist, racketeers who have designs on the heroine, a parent who attempts to end a romance and finally a murder of which the hero is accused. This film, however, doesn't work itself into a serious lather over these little problems. When things are in danger of becoming too heavy, a wisecrack or piece of comedy clears the air. Even the villain is permitted to retain his sense of humor—quite a departure from the usual film.

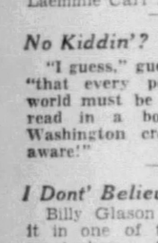
Syria Mosque was surprisingly well patronized last night. The event was the opening of May Beegle's concert series, her tenth anniversary of serving us the stars of the musical world, and last night's star was Maria Jeritza, radiant first lady of the Viennese and Metropolitan operas.



Mr. Lissfelt

Of Jeritza's vocal methods, if there be such, no one can speak with assurance, but some one ought to try to remake that beautiful voice. Jeritza would then be far more comfortable while singing and could devote her entire energy to the display of her marvelous histrionic and musical talents. Last night there were moments of thrilling music, but some drab and some exasperating moments as well.

The two French airs of Massenet and Tschaikowsky were merely introductory and "Elsa's Dream" from "Lohengrin," which followed as encore, brought the singer into her own and best, for she belongs entirely to the operatic stage and her "Elsa" is one of her finest roles. Here her knowledge of the fundamentals of rhythm and color in Wagner make her interpretations not only authoritative but endlessly attractive to the layman.

Her singing of German lieder always left much to be desired, for she over-dramatizes both music and text. Strangely enough, that is not the case with her French and English songs, and we must inform Jeritza that we are not so provincial as to accept without a grumble most of her trite English songs.

In conclusion came two magnificent airs of the Italian repertory, and in both the singer excelled what she had previously sung. She added the pathetic scene from "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Santuzza's", "Voi lo Sapete," and, perhaps because we were thinking of the last war and its close yesterday, Auguste Holmes' "Au Pays" in her best manner.

Kurt Ruhrseitz played good accompaniments, but as soloist was far from Syria Mosque caliber. Such a fuss over those st'lo pieces of Sibelius and Liszt! And then his Albeniz was made in a German conservatory, never in "Triana," a gypsy suburb of Seville. Unbelievable but he did give the Rachmaninoff C Sharp Minor Prelude as encore.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Players Get New Roles

Phillips Holmes has been signed to a long-term contract by Metro-Goldyn-Mayer. Holmes has been seen recently in such films as "Night Court," "70,000 Witnesses," "An American Tragedy" and "The Broken Lullaby." His first role under his new contract has not yet been decided upon.

"Fast Life" has been selected as the title for the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film featuring William Haines, Madge Evans and Cliff Edwards. The picture is based on the E. J. Rath novel, "Let's Go."

Ralph Morgan will have an important role in "Son-Daughter," the production co-starring Ramon Novarro and Helen Hayes.

Jans and Whalen, vaudeville team, are engaged in filming a short subject at M-G-M. The film will be titled "Wild People."

Sheridan Square Gets 'Movie Crazy' Today

Harold Lloyd's first picture in two years, "Movie Crazy," is billed for three days in the Sheridan Square beginning today. On Wednesday the bill will be changed to "Old Dark House," featuring Boris Karloff.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Walter Hampden winds up a week of "Cyrano De Bergerac," (still the best of all romantic plays) in the Nixon tonight, and the stage will be cleared of any remnants of Cyrano's dueling victims, so that the coryphees of the Earl Carroll "Vanities," coming Monday, will not slip on them and break their dates. 'Twas a week top-heavily successful for Mr. Hampden, thanks to student interest.

The players in the Pitt who look to Edwin Vail for their high signs and pay envelopes, complete a week of "The Good Fairy" tonight. Next week they'll be acting in a Barry Conners comedy, "Unexpected Husband," and rehearsing "Cradle Snatchers" for Thanksgiving week. The latter will feature Blanche Ring, noted comedienne, coming as a guest star.

A new burlesque, "Wine, Women and Song," is the bill in the Academy from today until next Sat. There will be the customary Sunday midnight show.

Dolly Hars has a prominent part in "Love's Command," new German film coming Monday to the Avenue Cinema for a week.

MELLONS' GIFTS OF $200,000 AID WELFARE CAMPAIGN

WORKERS PUSH FUND UPWARD; NEED GROWS

The 8,000 solicitors pushing the Welfare Fund campaign toward its $2,500,000 goal for its 1933 budget went to work today cheered by announcement of gifts of $100,000 each by A. W. Mellon and Richard B. Mellon.

The total reported at the workers' luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce Building yesterday was $1,089,117.

Meanwhile, social agencies report a heavy increase in their relief load. The total number of families receiving assistance is expected to pass the 40,000 mark for the first time in Allegheny County's history, next week. And on Monday the Allegheny County Emergency Association will run out of funds unless the state takes action.

The welfare drive, to continue until November 23, will be pushed toward its goal in a strong effort to obtain the money asked by that time, according to Campaign Chairman W. P. Witherow.

NEED FOR CITY MAP CITED

L. W. Montverde, chairman of the City Planning Commission, in an address over Station KQV last night, declared that a really accurate map of Pittsburgh never has existed. He said in part:

"The Planning Commission has been making such a map, called a topographical survey, but has been temporarily stopped by the deficit in municipal funds. It should be completed as soon as possible to effect both public and private economies. Property owners will save outlays for surveys; law suits will be reduced and simplified, and it will be less easy to have public money spent to meet a minor need at the cost of more important undertakings."

Monteverde's address was an advance feature of the national conference on city planning to be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Hotel Schenley. Sessions of the convention, and also an exhibit in Carnegie Museum of maps, models and drawings of proposed public improvements will be open to the public.

Negro Fliers Down On Continent Hop

BLAIRSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 12.—Two transcontinental fliers, on their way back to Alhambra, Cal., from New York, had narrow escapes when their biplane made a forced landing in Johnston's woods, near here, late yesterday. They were J. Herman Banning, pilot, and Thomas C. Allen, Negroes, both of Alhambra. The plane, damaged, was to be taken to Bettis Field, Pittsburgh, today.

PITTSBURGHER CONTRIBUTES CIPHER

Here, Cipher Fans, is a genuine cipher of Pittsburgh origin. It's tough and interesting to work on, yet it's quite easy when you get just the right system.

You can credit Frank E. Corbett of 3119 Wadlow street for your headache. As a hint—it's just a letter to the Cipher Editor. We'll call it Cipher No. 9, although it really is A-1.

Letter frequency will help—a little. So will something else—and that's what you have to discover.

We'll print some clues on Monday, if you think you need 'em.

(Pst, J. H. White: You'll have to make 'em tougher than that out in Clairton.)

Watch for more original ciphers from your fellow fans, cipher addicts. This is getting interesting.

Just because we turned the alphabet backward a lot of you cipher fans were stumped on No. 8.

Well, reverse the alphabet with your key letter on the back and "z, y, x" as your start. Like this:

Alphabet:

GRANTBSDEFHIJKLMOPQSU VWXYZ

Cipher letters:

ZYXWVUSQPOMLKJIHFEDCB TNARG

Now decipher No. 8, which was:

LOCMP LYQXW CQPCS YLEVL FWFON XYLCX EEYFE YLXVP NMXVN FBIQC FHPOF IJCVP YHSLE MPYCX

Now take the letter "L" in the cipher. That is equivalent to "I" in the alphabet; the letter "O" is that of "F," etc. Then see if the cipher doesn't read:

"If Sheridan's description of war is appropriate what would some folks term ciphers?"

Now do No. 9.

Chicagoan to Talk On American Art

Dudley Crafts Watson, of the Art Institute of Chicago, will speak on "Europe's Contribution to American Art" in the lecture hall of Carnegie Institute Monday evening. It will be the second talk given under the auspices of the Department of Fine Arts in connection with the exhibition of Carnegie International paintings owned in Pittsburgh. The lecture will be open to the public.

Plant to Close; Town Loses Siren

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 12.—Faced by the probability of being without a fire alarm siren, after next Tuesday, when the Mt. Pleasant Beverage Company's plant, where the whistle is located, is closed for repairs, Mt. Pleasant Borough Council is considering purchasing an electrically operated system.

It really works. There are at least two methods of solution. Letter frequency is one. Did you keep November 3's letter frequency table?

Fall From Ladder Fatal to Woman

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 12.—A fall from a stepladder a month ago, in which she broke her hip, resulted in the death of Mrs. Mary Melinda Mason, 63, near Hedgesville.

Rockwood Dentist Stricken Ill, Dies

ROCKWOOD, Pa., Nov. 12.—Dr. Charles H. Ridenour, 44, a dentist here for 22 years, died yesterday of a heart attack. He was a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh.

9 TOWNS PUSH RATE CONTEST

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 12.—Nine cities and boroughs in Westmoreland County have decided to carry their fight for lower water rates to the Public Service Commission.

The towns which have formed the Westmoreland Municipal Association are Greensburg, Southwest Greensburg, South Greensburg, Youngwood, Jeannette, Penn, Manor, Irwin and North Irwin.

Three courses of action were voted upon, one to buy out the Westmoreland Water Company and transfer it into a municipally-owned water company, to carry the fight to the Public Service Commission or to drop the contest.

MISDEED TRAPS FUGITIVE

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—One misdeed, buried for 17 years in the past of Edward Lamar, returned yesterday to upset his well-ordered life since then and paved the way for his return to Kentucky State Reformatory.

There he was known as Jesse Clark, convicted of grand larceny in 1915. He escaped, came to St. Louis, married and worked as a brick layer since that time.

A few days ago Lamar was walking down the street and, as he tells the story, made a careless gesture at the handle of an automobile door. The handle came off. A policeman spied the occurence and he was arrested.

Skeptical Trapper Verifies Story About Python Swallowing Man

CHAPTER XXVII.

More bunk has probably been disseminated about the python than about any other species known to the collector of reptiles and animals.

There is, for instance, a popular fallacy that the python has no constricting powers unless it happens to have its tail wrapped around a tree. This, they tell me, aids the creature in "getting a grip." A man once told me a story (a chap who knows Asia, too) about a jungle explorer who, suddenly coming upon a python that had poised itself for an attack, saved his life by dashing for a convenient clearing where there were no trees stout enough to provide the would-be killer with sufficient tail leverage.

The sheer absurdity of this yarn would be more obvious if the reader could see a big python coiled around a deer, wild pig or other animal and watch the huge reptile's muscular contraction as those deadly coils tighten up on the victim, pressing harder and harder until practically every bone in the creature's body is crushed. And while the terrific constricting power of the main part of its body deals destruction, the great snake's tail, instead of being wrapped around a tree, thrashes and switches about in all directions, pounding the ground until clods are pulverized to dust, leveling every standing blade of grass and bringing down all the shrubbery within reach.

MAN SWALLOWED

It is very unusual for one of these constrictors to single out a man for attack. A python's natural prey is something it knows at a glance it can swallow. Not many men fall into this category. The man under discussion certainly didn't, for I learned that he weighed 220 pounds.

In the course of years spent as a collector I know of only one case of a python actually swallowing a man. I have investigated a number of rumors involving alleged occurrences of this kind and time after time the stories proved false. Not until the summer of 1931—18 years after I investigated the first rumor of such a fatality—was I able to secure incontrovertible proof of one of these great constrictors attacking and devouring a man.

It happened this way. While I was in Rangoon word came in from Thaton that one Maung Chit Khine, a Burmese employed as a sub-agent by the firm of Coombes and Company, had mysteriously disappeared while hunting in a nearby jungle. According to the Rangoon Times, investigation revealed that the poor devil had been crushed and eaten by a giant python. Here was something worth looking into. I made up my mind to visit Thaton the first chance I got to see if I could verify the story.

FIRST KNOWN CASE

If it was true it had real scientific value. It would place in the zoological records the first provable instance of a python devouring a full-grown man. There has been many a case of a python swallowing a child (one is discussed at length earlier in "Wild Cargo") but nowhere did the records yield an example of the rarity reported in the press and widely discussed that day in the clubs and hotels of Rangoon.

A few weeks later I managed to find the time to make the trip to Thaton, which is about half way between Rangoon and Moulmein, and I soon learned that the astonishing report was correct. Here are the facts:

Khine and some friends were out hunting deer in a stretch of jungle not many miles from Thaton. When they had penetrated a certain distance they reached a point in the thicket that they considered ideal for their purpose. It was agreed that Khine's companions were to "beat out" the heavy brush and drive the quarry toward the place where he stood, ready to shoot.

The beaters spread out over a fairly large area and began their task. While these activities were in progress a heavy rain began to fall and the members of the group sought shelter under the nearest trees.

In about 20 minutes the rain ceased and the beaters spread out again to resume their hunting.

FAILS TO ANSWER

After two or three deer had been driven out of the brush toward their friend and no report from his gun had been heard, the group began to wonder why there was no sign of Khine. There was no reply to their shouts designed to get his exact location (they figured he, too, had sought shelter and perhaps afterwards had not taken up his original stand), and they grew worried.

They promptly ceased the unimportant business of trying to drive out a deer and started looking for their friend. As they combed the brush they kept crying out, but there was no answering shout. Alarmed by now, they sped up the search, feverishly examining every inch of the ground for some sign of their missing comrade.

Not long afterwards one of the searching party frantically called to his fellows to join him. As they came running up he pointed to the ground. Khine's shoes and sarong!

They were all puzzled. And more alarmed than ever.

When, a half-minute later, they found Khine's gun on the ground not many yards from the spot where they had found the shoes and sarong, they began to fear the worst. They shrieked out their friend's name, but again there was no answer. Maung Chit Khine was definitely among the missing.

GRUESOME DISCOVERY

Stunned by the weirdness of the situation, they again took up the search for their companion. Not much time had elapsed when a member of the party let out a blood-chilling scream. His friends, who were just behind him (the group had not separated this time) saw at a glance what had caused their comrade to cry out. On the ground, a few feet away, was a huge python. Its tremendous bulge plainly indicated that it had just gorged itself.

It wasn't difficult to guess what had happened. This jungle monster (it later developed that it measured 28 feet) had devoured their friend.

One of the group raised his rifle and was about to pump lead into the giant constrictor.

"No!" shrieked one of his companions. "Suppose a bullet enters the body of our friend inside the python's skin. It would amount to killing him all over again and we should never be forgiven."

A hardier and less superstitious member of the group raised his rifle and fired. Two other members of the party followed suit. The great reptile—too sluggish to escape or defend itself—proved easy prey and soon succumbed. In fact, the aroused Burmese almost shot the creature's head off.

GOV. ROOSEVELT TO STRESS ECONOMY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, President-elect, recognizes that the serious economic situation requires the highest degree of competence in his official family, and the sensitive nerves of business executives and financiers are likely to be steadied when he is ready to announce appointments to the cabinet.

Mr. Rukeyser

In revealing his policy during the campaign in respect to cabinet members, Mr. Roosevelt stressed chiefly the requirement that department heads should be in sympathy with his own insistence on rigid economy in the operating expenses of government. In discussing this aspect of the subject with a friend, the President-elect is reported to have said:

"Each cabinet member must so thoroughly recognize the need of economy as to be willing to see his own job abolished if necessary."

TASK DIFFICULT

In bidding for able men, the government will find the market value for executive services has fallen considerably in the last four years. Mr. Hoover put a number of millionaires in his cabinet, and doubtless all of them suffered severe shrinkage of their personal fortunes while in office. This time there is less hazard of similar depreciation, yet many prominent men have been so damaged financially that they will want to be free during the next four years in order to repair their personal estates. In the case of cabinet positions, the President can usually overcome such reluctance by the appeal to patriotism.

But in executive governmental positions just below the rank of cabinet member the question of inadequacy of salaries, as compared with the going rate in private business, tends to impair the quality of governmental service. Too many able men regard governmental work in the Internal Revenue Bureau and elsewhere as a mere stepping stone to lucrative private employment. In their zeal to make profitable contacts, some are restrained from independence in their official conduct. Williard Kiplinger, Washington analyst, in chatting with me about this situation, indicated his belief that it would be in the interest of true governmental economy to raise the salary up to the market level for several hundred key governmental posts. He thought such a move would be consistent with downward revisions for liberally paid routine jobs.

HITS PRACTICE

Walter N. Polakov, consulting engineer, has called upon organized business to cease holding back recovery through seeking to saddle on the consumer the cost of unwise plant investment. Dr. Polakov said:

"As the present depression is due to lack of purchasing power, it can be met my closing the gap between wages and prices. The practice of charging the overhead expenses accumulated by an idle portion of a plant to the cost of product manufactured in another part of the plant must be discontinued. If too large a factory was built by miscalculation or error in judgment, he who made the error shall pay the penalty, not the consumer.

"The overcapitalization and long since depreciated plants have likewise no room in price determination. Legislative measures are needed to stop such irresponsible manipulations."

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Bank clearings this week, at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, were $3,395,769,000, and show a decline of 37.3 per cent, as compared with a year ago. New York City clearings were again very greatly reduced, amounting this week to $2,205,001,000, a loss of 42.1 per cent, while the total for leading centers outside of New York of $1,190,768,000 was 25.9 per cent smaller.

In part the larger loss this week was due to the fact that the five days, omitting election day this year, are compared with six days a year ago. Outside of New York, a number of the cities, particularly those in the South, continue to show a curtailment in the declines, even though the week this year makes an uneven comparison. Clearings for this month to date were again slightly better than for the earlier months of the year.

Figures for leading cities as compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., showing decreases as compared with same period a year ago, follow:

Wholesale and Jobbing Trade Conditions

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Tabloid review of wholesale and retail business conditions as reported to Bradstreet's this week from the following centers, on the basis of comparisons with conditions in the same areas in the corresponding week last year:

	Whole. & job. tr.	Retail trade.	Mfg. & industry.	Collections.
Pittsburgh	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Chicago	Fair	Fair	Good	Fair
Cleveland	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Detroit	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Indianapolis	Fair	Fair	Fair	Slow
Louisville	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Milwaukee	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Des Moines	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Duluth	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Kansas City	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Minneapolis	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Omaha	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
St. Louis	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
St. Paul	Quiet	Fair	Quiet	Slow
Baltimore	Quiet	Fair	Quiet	Slow

Comment: Pittsburgh—Coal operations on upgrade; plate glass, though improved, continues below 1931; tableware and specialty lines on upgrade; building permits far below normal.

Chicago—Electricity output shows marked increase; steel operating capacity advances to over 19 per cent; lack of rain hurts southwestern winter wheat crop; grain prices continue low.

Cleveland—Wholesale and retail trades show signs of uncertainty; local steel plants get bulk of automotive orders; edible commodities selling at abnormally low prices.

Detroit—Employment 42 per cent of normal, due to inactivity of automobile industry; new models just beginning to be turned out; canning factories active; retail trade shows slight seasonal improvement.

AUTO INDUSTRY BUYING MORE STEEL

By B. E. V. LUTY

No reflection of the outcome of Tuesday's election is seen in the steel trade, orders and shipments being about the same this week as last, when there had been a slight decrease from the general pace of October.

The official report shows steel ingot production in October to have been at 19 per cent of capacity, against 17.34 per cent in September and 14.26 per cent in August, the low month, the total rise in tonnage in two months being 33 per cent, a percentage change rarely seen in so short a time.

Ingot production last week and this may be estimated at one point off from the October rate, or at 18 per cent, with no visible trend as to next week.

Assuming for computation purposes a continuance of the present rate, the fourth quarter would have a total ingot production of about 3,125,000 tons, representing 19 per cent increase over the third quarter and closely approaching the second quarter, while the year's quota would be about 13,400,000 tons.

SEASONAL FACTORS

After 16 consecutive months of decreases, the Steel Corporation's unfilled obligations increased 3.293 tons in August, 15,495 tons in September and 11,950 tons in October. These increases seem small by comparison with changes in active times when shipments were at several times the present rate and there was forward buying at one time, and excess shipments against old contracts at another time. Now orders are for prompt shipment and the three-month increase in unfilled obligations represents three days of shipments at the present rate.

The usual seasonal influence diminishing demand in the closing weeks of a year would be a small factor this time, as very little of the recent one-third increase in steel tonnage was traceable to seasonal demand.

AUTO MAKERS BUYING

With October the best month in steel production since May, the month's automobile production, estimated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at 50,270 cars and trucks, United States and Canada, was the lowest for any month in more than 10 years. Production is rising, contrary to usual season

PROFIT-TAKING CUTS STOCK ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The stock market encountered a little week-end profit taking in the early trading today, but maintained a fairly steady undertone.

American Telephone sagged nearly a point before meeting support, and Santa Fe lost about a point. United States Steel and New York Central dipped fractionally. A number of issues opened a little higher, however, but Case lost a gain of ½. Radio was steady.

Considerable interest was whipped up by a renewed report that the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric, which jointly control the Radio Corporation, were drafting a plan for submission to the government in an eleventh hour effort to avert the government's anti-trust suit, scheduled to start next Tuesday.

Incoming railroad earnings reports were somewhat mixed, but this was entirely according to recent pattern. The Missouri Pacific reported net loss of $212,266 in September against net income of $331,814 in September, 1931. Current liabilities on September 30 exceeded current assets by $9,897,000 against a similar excess of $368,000 a year ago. St. Paul made a relatively better showing in earnings than a year ago. While its September statement showed a new loss of $451,244, this compared with a net loss of $604,262 last year. The company's net working capital on September 30 stood at $11,922,000 against $20,499,000 the year previous.

Trapped bears in sterling exchange again enlivened that market at the opening, bidding the pound up 11-16 cent to $3.32⅝ for cables, following sterling's 33-16 cents gain of yesterday. The French franc reacted ⅛ point to 3.92 cents.

COPPER MARKET UNCHANGED

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Copper buying is small here and abroad. Armistice Day was a holiday in France, but sales were made in England and Germany. Metal was offered at a range of 5.50 to 5.70c c. i. f. Hamburg, Havre and London, and sales were made at 5.50 to 5.50c abroad. The larger foreign producers are holding their price and letting those who wish to sell take the business.

Little is likely to result from the conference of copper producers that is to be held here the latter part of November other than an agreement to continue the present curtailment rate of 20 per cent of capacity and some agreement regarding selling in the foreign market and disposal of stocks of copper.

Producers are out of the market here and most custom smelters do not care to sell at under 5½c for first quarter 1933 shipment.

MEXICO GETS OIL LOAN

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—A. J. Pani, Secretary of the Treasury, announced last night that three foreign petroleum companies doing business in Mexico had loaned the Mexican government $7,000,000 as a tax advance to be repaid within 40 months.

The three companies are the Aguila Oil Company (Dutch Shell), which advanced $3,000,000; the Huasteca Petroleum Company (Standard Oil), which gave $3,000,000, and the Pierce Oil Company, which participated for $1,000,000.

It was announced today that the $7,000,000 would be used in capitalization of three national banks to meet the nation's financial needs.

More Cottonseed Reported Crushed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Cottonseed crushed in the three-month period, August 1 to October 31, was reported by the Census Bureau today as having totaled 1,433,076 tons, compared with 1,386,768 tons in the same period a year ago, and cottonseed on hand at mills October 31 totaled 1,214,157 tons, compared with 1,201,029 tons a year ago.

Corn Export Rate Reduction Refused

In Mayfair

-With-

Patricia Pitt

In addition to the Yale-Princeton game this afternoon, acting as a magnet with so many of our smart set, there was a debut party last night to attract another member.

Althea Robinson, the William Christopher Robinsons' daughter, who probably will be presented in the late spring, is in New York for the debut party of her classmate at Farmington, Caroline Prentice Hoagland.

Caroline's parents, the Joseph C. Hoaglands, of New York and Auldwood, Rumson, presented her last night at a dinner-dance in their country home, Auldwood.

This weekend the debutante is entertaining a house party of schoolmates, including Althea.

Autumn Festoons

But to return to the debut party. The home was decorated with brilliantly colored autumn foliage and chrysanthemums. Guests were seated at small tables placed in the dining room and adjoining rooms.

Yellow flowers decked the larger table, where the debutante sat with her house party and other young guests.

After the Hoagland debut, the guests went to the supper-dance the James Ford Robinsons, Jr., of Halway House, Rumson, gave in the Rumson Country Club to present their daughter, Elizabeth Fisk Johnson.

One of our debutantes, Nancy Lee Byers, was at the Johnson party. She is one of 45 guests at a house party the Johnsons are entertaining this week-end.

Attends Debut

For the Johnson debut, chrysanthemums against a background of autumn foliage, were used in decorating.

Both house parties will be at the Yale-Princeton game this afternoon, and the Clement L. Despards, of Rumson, will give a tea after the game for the Johnsons' guests and for members of other house parties.

This evening the Johnsons will give an informal supper in their home for their guests, and later all will attend the Rumson Country Club's Saturday night dance.

There are innumerable house parties at Cornell during this weekend. A coterie of Winchester School students had a small reunion there. They were Mary Elizabeth Creighton, Carolyn Clare Snow, Mary Harrison and Peggy Clarkson.

Some In East

Yale - Princeton game today.

One of the most attractive gowns I saw in the smart assemblage was that of petite Betty Kennedy. It was of cranberry red crepe with wide flat bows of red velvet at the shoulders, giving the wide effect at the top of the silhouette so fashionable this year.

Her mother, Mrs. Betty Kennedy, chose a becoming gown of green crepe. Louise Evans, another member of the younger set, chose a brilliantly holly-red crepe gown, over which she wore a very brief jacket of black sealskin. Her mother, Mrs. Henry Oliver Evans, was with her.

Louise Baton chose an orange crepe frock and a white fur wrap, and her mother, Mrs. George S. Baton, was in orchid crepe.

Seen at Concert

Mrs. Jacob S. Payton, Mrs. Paul Tunnell, Mrs. Mortimer Miller, Ellen McClay, Juliet Hillman, Mrs. J. Hartwell Hillman, Jr., the John B. Sellerses and Mrs. T. A. Mellon were others in the audience.

Alice Rust chose a blue crepe frock. Gretchen Bickford wore a mint-green moire dress and a green velvet wrap, and Mrs. Joseph H. Bialas was regal in a long evening wrap of ivory lame, furred in mink, over a green crepe frock.

Rosemary Casey, the young playwright, was there, with her mother, Mrs. John F. Casey and Mrs. Sydney Binns in black velvet.

Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., whom you may be sure is always in the audience at any concert in Pittsburgh was there. Mrs. William Nimick Frew, Mrs. George Hamilton Flinn and Mrs. Herbert Dupuy.

Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe, also faithful concert goers were there.

In Black Velvet

Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, wearing black velvet with ermine for accent, was chatting in the lobby during intermission with the A. Rex Flinns. Mrs. Gordon King, wearing cream satin and moire, also was one of those greeting friends during the one intermission.

Mrs. Raymond E. Earp, wearing wine-red lace, came with her mother, Mrs. James M. Schoonmaker, in black lace. David I. McCahill was there with his two daughters, Marie and Marguerite, wearing smart frocks of black velvet with capes lined in white taffeta and with brief puffed sleeves of the taffeta.

Mrs. Marjorie Evans Stewart was with her daughter, Marjorie, and Mrs. A. S. F. Keister with her daughter, Jean. Dorothy Blaxter, one of the debutantes, came with her mother, Mrs. Henry Vaughan Blaxter.

Society Turns Out to Hear Jeritza

Everyone felt ever so friendly and gay at the Jeritza concert last night in Syria Mosque, from May Beegle, celebrating her tenth anniversary as a concert manager, the concert goers crowding the Mosque from the boxes to the topmost gallery, to Jeritza, who enjoyed herself thoroughly, and delighted her audience with her singing, her charm and her pleasantries.

The tall, blonde artist wore a gown of flax-blue chiffon having a scarf of the material and ruffles of the chiffon trimming the flowing skirt. And glittering here and there were sequins. She sang encore after encore, and received more applause than I recall any other artist ever receiving in Pittsburgh.

Everyone was there excepting some of the younger set lured east for the

VELVET USED AS TRIMMING IS WIDELY APPROVED BY STYLISTS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PRIS, Nov. 12.—Velvet, as trimming, is one of the high spots of this year's Paris fashions. The French designers find it an excellent balance for materials of all types, from chiffon to tweed, and for dresses that are worn from morning to midnight.

* * *

ONE OF its favorite uses this year is to ornament dresses which are meant to be kept in a single color. The all-red or all-brown dress becomes more distinguished once it incorporates a touch of velvet somewhere in its makeup, whether as a sash, a loose bow, or an incrusted yoke.

CHIFFON AND velvet are combined in the dinner dress done by Lucien Lelong and sketched for today. The chiffon is treated lightly, with tiny tuckings forming the design of a bolero on the blouse, marking a yoke and holding down the shoulder tips of the sleeves. Elsewhere the fabric is allowed to billow out into puff, sleeves tiny bias ruffles, and a full skirt. A wide velvet band, like a corselet, encircles the waist, then fastens with a buckle of brilliants at the front. The entire costume is in red.

ANOTHER LeLONG dress, which combines crepe tamaris with velvet, keeps to an all black color scheme.

GOSSIPY CHAT

By NANCY JANE

For the first time in years, some of the children of Pittsburgh's "400" are going to public school kindergarten.

Among them, little Martha Elizabeth Blair, the junior W. W. Blairs' daughter. Very shortly her parents were called into conference, because Martha was doing such queer drawings. The parents were much alarmed, and feared they had made a mistake, depression or no depression, in sending their little daughter to public school.

After investigation, the trouble was found in the Raymond Babcocks' son, another member of the smart set.

The mischievous Babcock youngster, who sat next to Martha, had told her she was supposed to draw the way he showed her!

When charming, patrician Mrs. John Walker, who has just moved to Maryland, reached the age of 70, she found she was bored for the first time in her life.

So she decided to take up painting. And she did. Her works were most pleasing. She particularly liked to paint in the garden at her summer home in Beaumaris, Canada, and had a studio in her North Side home.

Animated Woman's Page Of Daily 'Published' By Southern Club

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

A distinctly novel program and one that was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience was the animated woman's page presented yesterday at the Southern Club meeting in the Hotel Schenley. It all began with Mrs. E. Jerry Uhl, both literally and figuratively, for she planned the program and she it was who read her newspaper before stepping off to "town" and, as she read, the different "features" appeared from behind a newspaper covered screen.

Mrs. R. F. Metcalfe made a delightful society editor, detailing in intimate fashion gossip about the various members, which may or may not have adhered to fact. Miss Olive Kinsey presented a fashion review, Mrs. Milton Jena took the members "Shopping with Polly" and Miss Dorothy Daub (Babette) also spoke.

Mrs. M. S. Kimmel's several book reviews were most interestingly done and no less fascinating was the travel talk which Mrs. Ralph Emmett Porter gave of her own experiences. Mrs. William O'Lee contributed one of the most original bits of the afternoon. Dressed as an ample mammy, Mrs. O'Lee crooned famous recipes, among which was one for a good disposition. Mrs. John L. Perry read some of Mrs. Frederick Marshall's Armistice Day poems; Mrs. C. Perry Kiefer did a humorous lovelorn column; Mrs. Walter F. Irvin as the club editor talked about the club's annual charity ball, which isn't to be a charity ball this year, but a supper dance. Instead of cartoons, Mrs. Perry, Mrs. C. Fitzhugh Lee and Mrs. Walter Close gave a Clara, Lou and Em impersonation that was rich in wit and humor.

Mrs. Charles B. Ellis and Mrs. Fanny Loney Hooff presided at the tea and coffee urns during the social hour.

STUDENTS RETURN TO ROUGH GAMES

KNUTE ROCKNE USED to complain that the supply of football players was dwindling because there were too many raccoon coats on the campus. He said the inclinations of the students were more toward proms and pink teas than to rough sports in which the boys get mussed up. But if the University of Pittsburgh may be taken as a barometer, the trend is again the other way. The he-man is coming back, as witness the fact that Joe Orsini, Pitt boxing coach, reports no fewer than 90 candidates for the Panther fistic teams in the third year of that sport at the Oakland university.

Joe Orsini

In 1930, only 20 men came out. Last year the number was 40. Boxing has grown in favor at Pitt until now it ranks second only to football. Further evidence that the students are turning away from social pastimes to find a new appeal in strenuous sports is to be found in the records of W. Don Harrison, director of athletics. They show that the number of undergraduates at the Panther school now competing in intercollegiate athletics is more than double the total of four years ago. And that's not counting the small army participating in intramural sports. It runs up the expenses, but the athletic chiefs are glad to meet the extra cost. They regard it as a happy condition that promotes the health and general well-being of the student body.

EVIDENTLY IT TOOK a defeat to bring out the best in the Dukes. Since the reverse at the hands of West Virginia Wesleyan the Bluff boys have been clicking better than at any time since Elmer Layden came here to coach. The smashing 34-to-12 victory over South Dakota State added another impressive chapter to the story of the greatest comeback ever made by a Duquesne team.

And as Knute Rockne used to say, the proof of a real team is not so much the winning of every game, as the ability to come back and win after a defeat. Too bad that Ben Pawlina, cut down with a broken leg, could not have continued on with the Dukes in the great finish they are making and in which he has played such a strong part. A tough break for a fine player who had only two more games to go to wind up a brilliant college career.

ANY LINGERING DOUBT of Waynesburg's championship class, or its right to the season's laurels in the Tri-State Conference, was dispelled by the Wolf Pack's great uphill fight to a 6-to-3 victory over Geneva in Uniontown.

It was a tough game for either side to lose, and there was glory for the vanquished as well as for the victor, but Waynesburg's triumph was well-earned and deserved. There can be no question as to the class of a team that beats Geneva for an eighth straight win. The Conference title goes to a worthy holder.

WHAT BECOMES OF old-timers who thrilled gridiron fans a quarter of a century ago? In this case the answer is that they sometimes come back. Witness the return of Charles F. (Heff) Hershman, star fullback at Penn State from 1906 to 1909, who reappeared at his old school this week to complete work for a professional degree in mining engineering after practicing that profession for 20 years. Hershman had not seen the Mt. Nittany campus for two decades, having spent all that time in development work in almost every mining region in North America.

C. F. Hershman

HERSHMAN ENTERED PENN STATE from New York, with the Vorhis brothers, Larry and Bob. Bob Coulson rounded out a quartet that was to become known as a thick-and-thin group. Starring in football did not keep them from getting in a lot of good educational work, and all turned out to be successful men.

Bull McCleary, Bobby Burns, Harry McIlveen, Harry Weaver and Big Cyphers were some of Hershman's other contemporaries. He also played for one year with Mother Dunn, first of State's all-Americas. The first thing Hershman did on his arrival was to strike out for the football field and watch the practice. He has been almost a daily visitor since, frequently taking advantage of a lull in the practice to regale the 1932 Lions with tales of football at Penn State when he was a smashing fullback.

ONE OF THE few Carnegie Tech players to turn to coaching was Don Fletcher, former star lineman for the Tartan. He is head gridiron mentor at Appalachia (Va.) High School this season.

Fletcher has developed an unusually strong team and is having great success. His gridders last Saturday annexed the interscholastic championship of their county and have been designated to play for the state championship of Virgina some time in December.

THE ACHIEVEMENT OF Joe McCarthy in becoming the only manager ever to win pennants in both of the present major leagues has led baseball old-timers to recall that only one man ever topped the two loops in batting. The double champion was the late Ed Delehanty. He headed the National League hitters with an average of .408 while playing for the Phillies in 1899, and won the American League title with a mark of .376 while a member of the Washington club in 1902. Seven others who played in both circuits captured the clouting crown in one league, but were unable to repeat in the other. They were Willie Keeler, Jess Burkett, Hal Chase, Napoleon Lajoie, Elmer Flick, George Sisler and Harry Heilmann.

THE EASTERN SOCK market, Wilbur Wood finds, is still agitated over the question as to what extent Billy Petrolle was affected by making the lightweight limit for his title bout with Tony Canzoneri. The scales have played a big part in many ring matches.

For the lightweight championship battle in Goldfield in 1906, Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, in addition to forcing Joe Gans to make 133 pounds ringside, demanded that he be at that figure wearing his ring togs. Gans made the weight, but wrote his death warrant in doing so. Though he won the fight the strain led to tuberculosis, which claimed his life.

THE FATE OF Gans made some other fighters of that period and later wary about reducing. Packey McFarland probably could have been world lightweight champion if allowed to weigh 135 at 2 p. m. on the day of the fight, the present custom, but he refused to attempt 133 ringside.

"The public doesn't care a rap about a couple of pounds," McFarland remarked once in explanation of his stand while in Pittsburgh, "and I'm not going to Joe Gans myself to please any boxer who makes such a demand in order to get out of a match." So Packey passed up the title and saved his health.

Johnny Dundee

THERE HAVE BEEN some boxers who were able to put on and take off a lot of weight easily. Johnny Dundee was a notable example. He thought nothing of working down from 150 to 126 pounds and it is estimated that during his long career he left almost 3,000 pounds in the gymnasium. It never harmed him, and he is in excellent physical shape today. In 1925, weighing 155 in January, Charley Phil Rosenberg reduced to 116, two pounds under the limit, for a bantamweight championship match with Eddie (Cannonball) Martin on March 20, yet he was strong enough to win the title.

PANTHERS, HUSKERS CLASH

BANNER THRONG IN WASHINGTON FOR BIG GAME

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 12.—The Bucknell Bisons reaching town this morning, the stage was set for the big battle of Wash-Jeff and Bucknell elevens scheduled for this afternoon on the home field. Arranged as a feature of "Homecoming-Founders' Day," the gridiron spectacle is expected to be witnessed by a very big crowd. The town was alive with rival supporters early today.

Coach Carl Snavely and his Lewisburg warriors invaded Little Washington after spending the night in Pittsburgh. Bucknell has never won a game from W. & J. on Western Pennsylvania soil but last year at Lewisburg broke a long-standing jinx by triumphing for the first time in 11 engagements between the schools.

BIG PROGRAM ARRANGED

Despite inclement weather conditions college authorities have made arrangements to handle a capacity crowd. Both W. & J. and Bucknell followers were on hand to participate in the colorful program, which began in the morning with an address by Dr. Homer Price Rainey, Bucknell president.

While the Bisons were speeding westward Coach Hank Day put the final touches to his varsity. Only a light workout was ordered yesterday with pass defense, light dummy scrimmage and a long signal drill constituting the practice.

STAR PLAYERS OUT

Capt. Edward Nied will be lost to Bucknell, but this casualty will be offset by the loss of Basil Gray, local boy, who has started every game to date at center. Gray was injured in the Duquesne game last week. His post will be filled by Maury Lieber, Canton (O.) athlete.

Wash-Jeff has shown a new punch in drills this week and Day is confident his charges will show a complete reversal from the form they displayed against Duquesne.

A shakeup in the front line is impending. The backfield is undecided, although Day has indicated Zagray and Rometo, will be at halfbacks, Shaffer at quarterback, and Deacle at fullback.

Four members of the Bucknell team are Western Pennsylvanians. They are, Gene Zanarina, of Jeannette; Jack Dorman, of Smithton; George McGaughey, of Vandergrift, and Walter Gilleland, of Wilkinsburg. The lineup:

W. & J.		Bucknell.
Johnson	L. E.	Delaney
Rhodes	L. T.	James
Fite, J.	L. G.	Seles
Lieber	C.	Farina
Bubenheim	R. G.	Furiell

BUCKEYES CLASH WITH PENN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The chill of snow and the tingle of intersectional combat filled the air here today for the first football game between the University of Pennsylvania and Ohio State.

Due partly to weather conditions it was expected that not more than 25,000 persons would see the contest, the smallest crowd at a home-coming game since the Buckeye Stadium was dedicated.

Penn will be without the services of its plunging fullback, Carl Perina, who was injured last week in the Pitt game. He will be replaced by Paul Munger.

Ohio State will be in good shape with Oliphant probably starting at quarterback in place of Carl Cramer. The latter, however, is expected to break into the lineup before the game is over.

VICTORY FOR CHARLEROI

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 12.—Charleroi High scored a 19-to-6 victory over Washington in a class AA grid battle before a large Armistice Day crowd here yesterday afternoon. The Cougars completely outclassed the visitors.

LAWRY WITH BRENTWOOD

Timmy Lawry, star basketball player and co-captain of the Pitt Panther team of last year, has signed to play with the newly-organized Brentwood club of the West Penn Basketball League.

Matty, Jr. to Wed; Fiancee to Join Him in China

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—A 9,000-mile journey lies between Miss Margaret Phillips and her wedding to the son of the late Christy Mathewson, the famous baseball pitcher.

Miss Phillips declared she would sail December 2 for China, accompanied by her prospective mother-in-law, the widow of the New York Giants' player.

Some time in Christmas week she will be married to Lieut. Christy Mathewson, of the U. S. Army Air Corps, who is stationed for three years in Shanghai. They have been engaged for four years.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE LAST STAND—When the momentous call to "Cease Firing" terminated 1,560 days of carnage, known as the World War, on November 11, 1918, the scene of the actual Last Stand was a shellhole half way up the hill in the direction of the Bois de Wavrille, between Beaumont and Montmedy. I secured a picture of this historic shellhole and the exact measurements of its position during my sojourn in Eastern France last year. A MILITARY GABRIEL—Caporal-Clairon Pierre Sellier twice sounded the most important call in human history. The first time when he sounded "Halte-la, cessez le feu," on the momentous night when the German delegation, suing for peace, crossed the French line for the first time and the second time when the Armistice went into effect at 11 a. m. of the eleventh of November, 14 years ago, when he launched into the morning air the notes of his "General Cease Firing."

TOMORROW—FATHER OF 60 KINGS.

KING DEFEATS BELMONT

Jack King, of Little Rock, turned in his third straight victory in Pittsburgh last night when he won every round of the 10-round main bout at the Arena over Jimmy Belmont, Braddock welterweight. He previously had beaten Billy Holt and Tiger Joe Randall here.

The first round was the most thrilling of the battle, with King rocking Belmont with rights to the jaw and sending him to his knees, and then, as he tried to finish the job, running into a left hook that dumped him for a count of five. He jolted Belmont again with a right and then fell down before the bell. Thereafter he won handily, scoring heavily with lefts and rights at a distance and spiking Jimmy's guns in close. He weighed 148½ against 150 for Belmont.

GOOSBY FIGHT OUT

The other scheduled 10-rounder, between Frankie Goosby and Johnny Peppe, of Philadelphia, was thrown out by order of Boxing Commissioner Harry Farrell, who was reached at Scranton by telephone for his decision. Goosby originally was matched to box Nick Venore, of Philadelphia, but Venore was injured in an Election Day fracas in his home town and arrested. He notified the club on Thursday he would not be able to box and Peppe was sent on in his place.

No announcement of a substitution was made until after the weigh-in yesterday afternoon and then the club stated Venore was out because of injuries suffered in an automobile accident. Commissioner Farrell ruled out Peppe on two counts, one that he is scheduled to box in Scranton, Monday night, and the other that he scaled 13 pounds more than Goosby.

FANS COLLECT REFUND

Announcement was made from the ring following the first bout that Goosby would not appear and money would be refunded to any fans who were not satisfied with this arrangement, and a flock of them headed for the box office to collect. The others stayed on and saw 10 rounds less than had been advertised.

Johnny Hazel bested Nick Caruso. Carl Montebano won over Casey Rhodes and Johnny Woods got the decision over Jimmy Gilligan in the six-round preliminaries. Phil Scello, of McKeesport, made his bow as a judge, working with Freddie Lux. Al Grayber and Jack Henderson refereed.

Fight Results

At Arena, North Side—Jack King defeated Jimmy Belmont, 10 rounds; Johnny Hazel defeated Nick Caruso, 6 rounds; Carl Montebano defeated Casey Rhodes, 6 rounds; Johnny Woods defeated Jimmy Gilligan, 6 rounds.

At Philadelphia—Al Ettore defeated Frankie Cawley, 10 rounds; Eddie Houghton knocked out Buddy Roberts, 3 rounds; Chick DeMarco knocked out Joe Lynn, 1 round; Ted Ivins knocked out John O'Tarro, 2 rounds.

At Miami, Fla.—Tommy Freeman defeated Doc Conrad, 10 rounds; Texas Kid knocked out Lou Novarro, 1 round; Johnny Semus defeated Marty Hauck, 8 rounds.

At Chicago—Barney Ross defeated Goldie Hess, 10 rounds; Frankie Battaglia knocked out Young Terry, 7 rounds; Dave Shade defeated Sammy Slaughter, 10 rounds; Hymie Schmidt defeated Jack O'Connell, 4 rounds; Joey Medill defeated Kid Roberts, 4 rounds.

Between Rounds

Eddie Dempsey, Philadelphia welterweight, is a visitor in Pittsburgh, and will remain here if he can get action. Otherwise he will head for the Coast. He has boxed Johnny Datto, Dick Evans, Babe McGorgary, Trader Horn and others in his close to 75 bouts.

The card has been completed for Monday night's boxing show at Motor Square Garden with the signing of Steve Senich and Al Farone for one of the three six-round preliminaries. Jimmy Hogan meets Red Bush and Johnny Hazel opposes Petey Sherman in the others. Frankie Bojarski boxes Sid Silas and Jimmy Thomas battles Juan Cruz in the two eight-round bouts which comprise the double windup.—HARRY KECK.

TECH, XAVIER LURE CROWD

CINCINNATI, Nov. 12.—Carnegie Tech and Xavier University were to clash in football here today for the first time in history. The game, which will be played at Corcoran Field, Xavier's beautiful Stadium, is the main feature of the local school's homecoming celebration, and the largest football crowd in Cincinnati's history was in prospect.

The invading team arrived late last night, and Coach Bob Waddell, in charge of the party, reported his squad in excellent physical condition after a rest of two weeks.

Coach Meyer, of the home outfit, also announced that his team was primed to the minute, and ready to make a fight of it against the famous visitors.

The spotty records of both teams has had no effect on a brisk ticket business, and last night's sales indicated a throng of some 20,000, if the weather remains fair.

Hooks Sample, co-captain of the Skibos, is well-known in this district, as he was a former resident of Middletown, not far from Cincinnati. A large delegation of his friends will attend the game, as it is their first opportunity to see him playing on a college team.

Judge Walter P. Steffen, Tech's advisory coach, arrived from Chicago this morning, and after a huddle between Waddell and the judge, Carnegie's starting lineup of the regular team was named.

FREEMAN GETS DECISION

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Tommy Freeman, 157, former welterweight champion, won a 10-round decision from Doc Conrad, 164, of Newark, N. J., last night. Texas Kid, 133½, of Newark, knocked out Lou Novarro, 138, of Havana, in the first round of a scheduled eight-round bout. Johnny Semus, 144, of Bermuda, won an eight-round decision over Marty Hauck, 142, of Canton, O.

GAELS DEFEAT U. C. L. A., 14-7

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—St. Mary's carnival-clad gridders returned to the Western wars yesterday and before an Armistice Day crowd of 65,000 flashed to a 14-to-7 victory. The Gael triumph had a three-fold significance. It sent the University of California at Los Angeles down to defeat for the first time this season; it retaliated for the beating the Uhlans administered a year ago today, and eased in some degree the pain of the trouncing Fordham meted out last Saturday to the rainbow-robed eleven.

Poor kicks paved the way for St. Mary's touchdowns. Decker, punting from behind his goal line, had his boot partially blocked. The ball rolled dead on the 10-yard line and Baird swept left end on the first play to score.

Early again in the third quarter Decker's kick rolled out of bounds at midfield and Beasley slicked through center to a touchdown from the eight-yard line after he and Baird had taken the ball there on three first downs through the line.

U. C. L. A. had one scoring chance and accepted it.

if the boys play the ball of which they are capable, they'll beat even the ferociously determined Husker eleven that will take the field against them.

FOE MAY HURT SELF

Nebraska is taking this game seriously, too seriously for its own good. If the boys go in there against the battle scarred and sophisticated Panthers, they are likely to be keyed to too high a pitch. The result may be tragic.

Pitt isn't taking this game lightly. Coach Sutherland will start his second eleven, but only because the varsity needs all the rest it can get and because the second team is a right powerful unit. If the team that Jock sends in there this afternoon clicks, Nebraska will add another defeat to its right creditable record for the year.

Panther elevens always play good ball here, twice the Pittsburgh troops have entered games here in Lincoln on the short end, only to come through in dazzling fashion and gain a pair of scoreless ties.

GETTO'S CUTE TRICK

Here's a little yarn that will serve to demonstrate the way Pitt takes these Nebraska ball games here. It's your correspondent's "smack in the nose" story.

Back in 1926, the Panthers came here doped to lose by at least three touchdowns. The odds favored the Huskers by 10 to 3. Blue Howell, Husker fullback, was the spearhead of a great team, one that should have gone places.

On the first play of the game after the kick-off, Howell rammed through Pitt's right tackle for about eight yards. Pitt took time out and Charley Tulley, who was playing right tackle, went over to Mike Getto, Pitt's all-America left tackle. Tully said:

"Mike, I can't handle these babies. I'll need some help."

Getto replied:

"Yeh, well, listen Charley, either you stop those guys or I'll stop you with a smack on the nose."

TULLEY CAME THROUGH

On the next play, Reb Russell, who later made the All-American team as star of Northwestern, went crashing at right tackle. Tulley broke through and tossed him for a loss and from there on the situation was saved. Nebraska didn't register a first down, never advanced the ball beyond its own 45-yard line and Tulley and Getto were in the Husker backfield all afternoon.

That is the way Pitt looks at games with Nebraska.

The Panthers arrived here from their zero-hour hideout in Omaha this morning. Despite the snow and cold—and boy, Oh! boy, it is cold—the Pitt squad had a snappy drill yesterday. Coach Sutherland trailed the second team, which will be the "first" eleven today, and Andy Gustafson handled the varsity.

REGULARS IN RESERVE

Starting today's tussle with the Huskers for Pitt will be a backfield composed of Miller Mungas at quarter, Capt. Paul Reider and Matesic at the halves and Heinie Weisenbaugh at fullback, and a line having Timmons and Rooker at the ends Meredith and Hoel at the tackles, Seigal and Ormiston at the guards and Shotwell at center. The varsity will be ready for instantaneous relief duty.

Nebraska's starting lineup, for the most part, is inexperienced, particularly at the tackles and guards, a bad place to be inexperienced. They have a fine player at left end, Steve Hokuf, four good backs, in Masterson, Mathis, Miller and Sauer, and a really brilliant center in Capt. Ely.

Penney will play the wing opposite Hokuf; Hulbert and O'Brien will go at the tackles, and Bishop and Debus at the guards.

Mathis is rated as a hard-running hard-hitting back. Sauer proved his worth even in the rout in Pittsburgh last year and Masterson is accounted a clever quarterback.

WEATHER BIG FACTOR

The wind and cold will play an important part in deciding the breaks today. If the temperature takes a jump, the Pitt team will use its aerial game. But if it continues cold, handling the ball will be the big problem.

Besides, Memorial Stadium is laid out from north to south, and with the wind sweeping in full and almost terrific force through the open ends of the stadium, the kickers are going to be at a great disadvantage for at least two periods.

A win today means so much to Pitt, almost as much as it would mean to the Huskers, and with the best team, on paper, at least, and the correct mental attitude, it looks very much as though it would be a Panther holiday.

VICTORY OVER GENEVA MAKES WAYNESBURG CHAMPION

DUKES, SAINTS IN DECISIVE TRIUMPHS

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

District football fans had one ear cocked for news of the Pitt-Nebraska game at Lincoln, Neb., today, while they found time to consider the happenings of yesterday in the special Armistice Day battles.

The victory of the Waynesburg Yellow Jackets by a 6-3 score over Howard Harpster's Geneva College stars at Husted Field, Uniontown, was the tidbit of the day, with Coach Frank Wolf's team coming from behind to tally in the final period. With the victory went the Tri-state Conference and district Class B championships for the year and every right to turn the old home town upside down in celebration. The Jackets have been undefeated and untied, and also boast their second victory in as many years over Penn State College.

PAWLINA BREAKS LEG

Duquesne University used all of its manpower to crush a fighting South Dakota State eleven, 34-12, with a final period burst of scoring at Forbes Field, a costly victory in that it saw Ben Pawlina, star halfback, suffer a broken right leg when heavily tackled while running with the ball late in the second period. Pawlina is in Mercy Hospital.

A 19-7 victory for the St. Vincent College Bearcats at Latrobe and a 19-6 triumph for Davis and Elkins over St. Thomas at Scranton were other major developments of the day in games concerning district teams.

Waynesburg's victory was well merited, for it made 14 first downs against nine for Geneva and outpassed the Covenanters, who were expected to shine in this department. The first break came at the start of the second half, when Geneva recovered a Waynesburg fumble on the Waynesburg 34-yard line on the first play after the kickoff. On last down, with three yards to go, Art Grahame, the quarterback, went back and drop-kicked a field goal, a rarity in these parts.

WAYNESBURG RALLIES

The three points from the goal looked like the winning margin in the tussle on a muddy field before a crowd of almost 10,000, but Waynesburg rallied early in the final period and organized an attack that carried the ball from its own 44-yard line following a punt, to a touchdown, with Halfback Rollason going over from the five-yard line off tackle. Donnelly missed the try-for-point.

A crowd of only about 5,000 saw the Dukes win over the Jack Rabbits, after tough going for three quarters. The South Dakota team, with only 11 reserve players, scored first and led, 6-0, at the end of the quarter, trailed, 14-6, at the half, and scored again in the third period, which ended with the Dukes leading by only two points, 14-12. Then Coach Layden sent a fresh lineup into the game and kept feeding replacements until he had cleared the Duquesne bench of every player. The tired Dakotans willed under this barrage of new material and were powerhoused for three touchdowns and 20 points in the last 15 minutes of play to run up the score to sizable proportions.

M'DONALD IS STAR

Halfback Jim McDonald was the star for the Dukes, scoring four of their five touchdowns, three of them on end runs and the other one on a jump over the line. Fullback Zaninelli turned in the next to last tally. Johnson, halfback for the visitors, was their star.

The first score was the result of a well-conceived left-handed forward pass by Quarterback Pofahl to Palmer, the end, who made the catch on the Dukes' 40-yard line and ran unmolested for the score. It was a 55-yard play. The Dukes went into the lead when they received a punt on their 16-yard line just before the first period ended and started a march of 84 yards to the goal in six plays. McDonald skirting end from the two-yard line early in the second period. Sullivan kicked the try-for-point, and the score was 7-6. Long runs by Sullivan, Zaninelli and Pawlina featured the parade.

DUKES INTERCEPT

McDonald scored again near the end of the half, from the five-yard line, after the Dukes had intercepted a pass on the Dakota 39-yard line. A roughing penalty of 15 yards on the play in which Pawlina had his leg broken figured in this scoring. Zaninelli's try-for-point was good.

The Rabbits put themselves back into the running when they took the kickoff for the second half on their five-yard line and returned it to the 37, and then, aided by two long passes to Palmer, on the second of which he was halted on the two-yard line, drove to their second touchdown in eight plays. Palmer's try-for-point was blocked, as had been his first effort.

ST. VINCENT CLEVER

Pepped up with a fresh team, the Dukes ambled 86 yards in nine plays for a touchdown as the fourth period opened, and Zaninelli kicked goal. They intercepted a pass on the 27-yard line and had another touchdown in five plays, one a long pass by Sullivan to Baker on the two-yard line. The final tally came when McDonald ran 26 yards around left end on the fifth play after he had made a fair catch of a punt on the Dakota 43-yard line.

SAINTS START FAST

St. Vincent scored all three of its touchdowns in the first half in beating Grove City, 19-7, and the Grovers saved themselves from a shutout with a passing attack in the final period. Johnson scored in the first period from the four-yard line, where he had received a pass after the Saints had recovered a Grove City fumble.

A blocked kick netted the second touchdown when Zappone fell on the ball behind the Grove City goal. Johnson scored the final touchdown for the visitors after a running and passing game had brought the ball within payoff distance.

Scoville Takes Lead In Cue Tournament

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, gained undisputed possession of the lead in the Eastern Sectional Three-Cushion Billiard tournament last night, defeating Joe Chamaco, of New York, 50 to 47.

The Buffalo star, winner of the tournament a year ago, ran out in the 58th inning. His high run was eight; Chamaco's four.

Scoville now has won four matches and lost only one. Kinrey Matsuyama, of Japan, and William Greenwood, of Pittsburgh, are tied for second place with four victories and two defeats. Chamaco is fourth with three and two, while James Beecher, of Buffalo, brings up in the rear with eight successive defeats.

LOCAL NATATORS BREAK RECORDS

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa., Nov. 12.—Three records were broken here yesterday as the Homestead Library swimmers officially opened the new swimming pool at the college.

Mary Cosgrove was the star, as she clipped nearly 38 seconds from the 220-yard junior A. M. A. free style record. The youngster covered the distance in 3 minutes 3 4-10 seconds. The old record was 3 minutes 41 seconds.

Johanna Gorman, a sister of the Olympic star, Anna Mae Gorman, bested the senior A. M. A. back stroke record at 150 yards. Her time was 2 minutes and 5 seconds, against the old time of 2 minutes and 18 seconds.

The same girl broke the 100-yard back stroke for the senior A. M. A. with a time of 1 minute and 19 3-10 seconds. The former time was 1 minute and 21 seconds.

Louise Clark brought the crowd to its feet when she established the fast time of 4 minutes and 38 5-10 seconds for the 300-yard medley. Miss Clark is the junior national medley champion. Lenore Kight, Olympic swimmer, failed in her attempt to break the 300-yard free style record. She was timed in 3 minutes and 41 5-10 seconds. The record is 3 minutes and 41 4-10 seconds.

The real thrill came when a women's relay team failed to break the 400-yard free style record by one-tenth of a second. The group, headed by the Misses Gorman and Kight, turned in a beautiful exhibition in this event.

OLYMPICS NEXT ROONEY FOE

By TOM BIRKS

With their unbeaten record still intact, the Rooneys will clash with McKeesport Olympics at Olympia Park tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Flashing their greatest strength of the season, the Rooneys swamped the East Liberty Papales at Peabody High School Field yesterday by a 20-to-0 score.

Unless the Olympics stop the Big Green machine tomorrow, Art Rooney and his aggregation of gridders may go through the season undefeated. The Rooneys flashed brilliant football yesterday, Jimmy Clark, Mose Kelsh, Bud Devinney and Bucky Wagner thrilling a large holiday crowd.

The Rooneys scored in the second period, when Clark pulled a Papale pass out of the air and ran 40 yards to be downed on the Papale 10-yard stripe. Jimmy Rooney went over for the touchdown, and then kicked the extra point.

The next marker came in the third period, Clark going around right end 25 yards for the touchdown, and again Rooney kicked the extra point. Kelsh, the greatest battering ram of the sandlots, swung into action in the final period. He battered the East Liberty line for four first downs and a touchdown.

Western Maryland Ties Boston College

NEWTON, Mass., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—After remaining in a daze during all of the first period, the Green Terrors from Western Maryland awoke with a start yesterday and put on an amazing surge that wiped out a two-touchdown lead as they ripped the heavy Boston College line to shreds for a 20-20 tie.

Bill Shepherd and Jim Dunn, Western Maryland's backfield stars, broke through the Eagles' tackles when the visitors got a chance to start their attack in the second period. The former marched 60 yards, almost single-handed for the Terrors' first touchdown and Dunn scored the other two after receiving behind the line passes and running 30 and 38 yards in the third and fourth quarters.

IRISH HORSE WINNER

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Outlasting the pick of the Army equine jumpers of four nations, Shannon Power, perfectly ridden by Capt. Daniel Corry, of the Irish Free State, last night won the international military sweepstakes at the National Horse Show.

With three perfect performances, the giant chestnut gelding from the Emerald Isle defeated a field of 25 after two jumpoffs. In the final test Capt. Corry sent his mount over the intricate course in 44 2-5 seconds to defeat Michael, with Capt. C. C. Mann, of the Canadian army, up, by nearly 4 seconds. Capt. Munn also scored three perfect performances with his mount.

Eight were deadlocked after the first trip over the course as the result of faultless exhibitions. These were Ugly and Joe Aleshire, of the United States; Michael, of Canada; Shannon Power, Gallow Glass and Ireland's own of the Irish Free State, and Tenace and Robespierre, of France. Under the rules, the jumpoff was decided on time and faults.

Shannon Power and Michael were the only two of the eight to score perfect performances on their second trip over the fences. They were each timed in 45 2-5 seconds.

Referee Forfeits Game to Meadville

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The "50-yard line quarterbacks" today pondered Titusville High School's 1-0 forfeiture of a sectional championship game with Meadville.

The game was broken up after three scoreless periods yesterday as fans swarmed across the field, protesting a decision of Referee Hart, who ordered a Titusville and a Meadville player "benched."

Hart was cut by flying glass while driving away from the field, as irate rooters smashed the windows of his machine.

MATCH WALLACE, FULLER

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Billy Wallace, Cleveland lightweight, and Sammy Fuller, of Boston, yesterday were signed for a 12-round bout December 6 or 7 as the feature of the Christmas Fund boxing show. Several months ago Fuller technically knocked out Wallace in Madison Square Garden, New York.

ROSS WINNER OVER HESS IN TEST BOUT

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Barney Ross, Chicago youngster, clamoring for a championship engagement with Tony Canzoneri, decisively defeated Goldie Hess, of Los Angeles, in their 10-round battle at the Chicago Stadium last night.

Ross missed a chance to knock out Hess in the third round when he had him rocking on his heels from left and right-hand punches to the chin. Hess clung to the top rope of the ring to support himself. In the following rounds, however, the Californian managed to successfully protect his chin by wrapping his elbows around his head, while Ross drove punches at him with machine gun rapidity.

Frankie Battaglia, of Winnipeg, Canada's challenger for the middleweight championship, defeated Young Terry, of Trenton, N. J., in the seventh round of their scheduled 10-round bout by a technical knockout.

The heavy-fisted and clever Canadian knocked Terry down three times in the first round, twice for counts of nine, and finished him 40 seconds after the start of the seventh. After a left hook dropped Terry for the count of eight, Battaglia smothered him with punches until Referee Johnny Behr ended it.

In the sixth round Battaglia caught Terry with a right uppercut dropping him for a count of nine. He managed to scramble to his feet before the count was finished, but was an easy victim for Battaglia in the seventh.

Dave Shade, veteran San Francisco middleweight, reversed a previous decision Sammy Slaughter, Terre Haute, Ind., Negro, scored over him by outscrambling Slaughter, protege of Bud Taylor, in their 10-rounder. Shade with 300 bouts under his belt, had too many tricks for Slaughter.

Cleveland Skaters Open With Deadlock

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The Windsor Bulldogs and Cleveland Indians fought to a 4-4 tie in the opening game of the International Hockey League season here last night. It was a rough game, bringing 14 penalties, including a pair of majors.

Cleveland drew first blood when King Williams took a pass from Bernie Brophy and beat Norm Smith. Windsor got its teamwork clicking in the second period and tied it up at 4-4 and the remaining 30 minutes failed to break the deadlock.

LONDON COPS INAUGURAL

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 12.—(AP.)—The London Tecumsehs opened the International Hockey League season with a brilliant 3-to-1 victory over the Detroit Olympics. The Tecs scored once in the second period and twice in the third before the Olympics were able to get a shot past Herbie Stuart.

St. Thomas evened the count in the third period when Ratomess snared a fumble out of the air and raced unmolested for 35 yards and a touchdown.

TURTLE CREEK, JEANNETTE IN SCHOOL TILT

By JULIUS LEVIN

While the football schedule offered the followers of the scholastic sport in Western Pennsylvania this afternoon is one of the lightest of the season, the program makes up in attractiveness what it lacks in quantity.

The major portion of attention centers on the outcome of the Jeannette-Turtle Creek Union battle in the Turtle Creek Union Stadium, where Markley Barnes' eleven will be out to take undisputed possession of first place in the Class AA Conference.

JAYS OUT FOR LEAD

Jeannette at present is tied with New Castle, which is playing a non-league opponent in Youngstown South this afternoon. Jeannette is one of the few Conference members playing five league rivals, one more than required by Conference rules. This fact, however, will not give Jeannette a higher rating than New Castle in event the latter team wins its four games and Jeannette stretches its streak to five victories when it engages Greensburg.

Besides the New Castle-Youngstown South game at New Castle, the Western Pennsylvania schedule is unusually attractive. Two local prep schools oppose strong rivals. Shady Side Academy plays Nichols in Buffalo in its final Tri-State Prep School League game, while Arnold Prep entertains Western Reserve Academy, of Hudson, O., on the Braddock avenue gridiron.

AMBRIDGE AT MIDLAND

Ambridge High, setting the pace in the class A race, goes after its seventh straight victory over a class opponent by tackling Midland at Midland. Monongahela, coached by Tuffy McMillan, plays its second class A opponent of the week by tangling with California at California. Tuesday the Monongahela eleven scored its third class A victory by defeating German Township. All contenders must play six class A rivals to figure in the championship race.

Rochester plays at Ellwood City, Connellsville at Uniontown, Arnold at Derry Township, Freeport at Tarentum, Hurst at Latrobe, Mercer at Slippery Rock, Grove City at Farrell and Newton Falls at Brookfield in other important games.

TRIUMPH FOR GREENSBURG

Greensburg, one of the crack elevens of the Class A A League, achieved a 13-to-0 victory over Monessen in an exciting game in Greensburg. Wilkinsburg High took the measure of Swissvale, 12-0. Clairton High bowed to Aliquippa in a hot fight. The score was 7-0, Aliquippa scoring in the last period when Yacopina fell on a blocked punt for a touchdown. Braddock High nosed out Homestead, 7-6, in an interesting scrap.

Bellevue defeated Ben Avon, 12-0; Coraopolis defeated Sewickley, 26-0; New Brighton defeated Freedom, 52-0; Central Catholic defeated Aspinwall, 12-0; Crafton defeated Bridgeville, 14-0; Butler and New Kensington played a scoreless tie; Burgettstown defeated McDonald, 14-6; Johnston defeated Mt. St. Mary's of Pittsburgh, 6-0; St. Justin defeated St. Joseph, 13-7; Ford City defeated Kittanning, 39-0.

Hinchman Gets All-America Grid Rating

By CHRISTY WALSH
Member All-America Board of Football
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

Another list of 10 players, with six names appearing for the first time, have been selected for All-America rating on the basis of games played last week. Competition is getting keener, and, with only four weeks remaining until the All-America team is selected, weekly ratings from now on will show a very close indication of the players who may survive the final test. The following players will receive a card of merit this week, issued by the All-America Board of Football:

NEWMAN—Michigan. After running back an Indiana punt to the 48-yard line, followed by his 34-yard twisting run from scrimmage, Newman, two plays later, took the ball from center, deceived the opposition tacklers and crossed the line for the only touchdown of the game. He added one point with a goal kick and, almost singlehanded, defeated a stubborn Indiana challenger. Scouted and rated All-America by Eddie Ash, Indianapolis Times.

All America Ratings

DANOWSKI—Fordham. This boy was the spear head of a rejuvenated and inspired Fordham offense. As a ball carrier and blocker, he repeatedly bowled over St. Mary's strong tacklers, while his long punts and repeated quick kicks kept the Gaels deep in their own territory, with little opportunity to gallop.

GRIFFITH—Southern California. Playing a combination of quarterback and fullback, he started the landslide against California with a touchdown in the first quarter. In the third quarter, he repeated with two more touchdowns and throughout the game gave a thrilling exhibition of line smashing and open field running that rates him all-America for the week.

NISBET—Washington. This aggressive end is what they call the coaches' type of player. Every rival coach has praised his work. He played a great game against Stanford, and, according to Pop Warner, member All-America Board of Football: "Nisbet has no weaknesses."

CAIN—Alabama. The savage blocking, tackling and interference of Alabama's southpaw fullback spiked the championship aspirations of Virginia Polytechnic. When Cain, painfully injured two weeks ago, returned to the lineup, Alabama's morale rose 90 per cent and this won the game for the Crimson Tide, according to Zipp Newman, of the Birmingham News.

VIDAL—United States Military Academy. Eddie Casey, Harvard coach and member All-America Board of Football, rates this Army quarterback as one of the outstanding offensive backs of the year. His sensational open field running and speed wrecked Harvard's chances at Cambridge. Vidal is tireless and consistent and a great strategist in sizing up the weakness of his opponents.

CORBUS—Stanford. This guard is rated All-America by Coast authorities, particularly for his fine offensive and defensive work in a close game against Washington last Saturday. Throughout the season Corbus has been a deadly blocker and interferer.

HINCHMAN—Ohio State. Turning in one of the wisest games of his football career, this Buckeye captain took the play from Northwestern's touted passing combination, and Ohio State won by a lopsided score. By his punting, passing or running with the ball, Hinchman was a factor in every point scored by his team.

ZIMMERMAN—Tulane. In last Saturday's game against Georgia Tech, according to W. A. Alexander, member All-America Board of Football, Zimmerman proved his right for All-America consideration. This 190-pound back can do everything—punt, block, tackle, and has the speed and grace of a frightened deer.

BROVELLI—St. Mary's. This plunging, jabbering, tireless dynamo received the greatest personal ovation last Saturday ever given to a visiting player in the history of New York football. Brovelli's team was defeated—Brovelli made no touchdowns—Brovelli made no spectacular runs for distance, but he rates All-America because of his amazing grit and determination. He blocked, tackled, smashed interference and did the punting, several times nailing the punt receiver in his tracks.

Girls Should Guard Against Inconsiderate Suitors

That's what Blondie has done; and now she's wondering what to do about it.

It's a man, of course, and why she ever grabbed on to him in the first place is a mystery. Even before Ole Man Depression came along, he seldom had a job. She's been "helping him out" ever since the first day she met him, in return for which he's plainly cheated on her, every chance he got. Yet—

"I just can't stay away from him!" she moans. "I'm so used to having him around that I don't know what I'd do without him!"

And she wants us to tell her where to turn next.

Have you any ideas? Listen! "Dear Miss Martin:

"You must try to give me your best advice, because I am between the devil and the deep sea. Everyone advises me to do something different, so I am not going to do anything until I hear what you have to say.

DOESN'T BELIEVE HIM

"I am a young lady 25 years old. For the past five years I have been going with a young man, seeing him on an average of five times a week, and he has never been really faithful to me during all those years. About four years ago I met his parents, and since then I have visited at his house. Frequently, while I'm there, he gets phone calls from girls, and I get very angry about that.

"He claims that he doesn't see these girls, even though they do call him up. Of course I don't believe that. I don't think they'd keep on calling him, if he didn't.

"He seldom, if ever, works, and I have helped him out financially ever since the first day I met him. When he does work he buys himself clothes. He never brings me a gift, in spite of the fact that he claims he is very much in love with me.

ACCUSTOMED TO HIM

"If I mention marriage he gets angry and says that is out of the question until he is in good financial shape. The way things look now, he never will be. He never worked steady, even before the depression. He's not a 'go-getter' like other men.

"I am very much in love with him, and I can't bear the thought of his being unfaithful. I have always been on the level with him. When I think of all these things, I want to give him up the worst way, but I find it very hard to keep away from him. I am so accustomed to him that I don't know what to do without him.

"Yet it seems from his actions that he couldn't possibly love me, in spite of what he says. Will you please tell me if you think I am right about his going with other girls? Do you think they would call him, if he didn't? I just can't bear the way things are going. What shall I do? What do you think?

"BLONDIE."

What do I think?

Well, I've seen people who loved punishment, but you hold the record, girlie. And I'm willing to bet that a straw vote would elect you as "the world's champion sap."

SURE POISON

According to your own story, this man is a lazy moocher, selfish and conceited, who takes everything and gives nothing, and yet you're worrying about whether he sees some other girl or not!

Snap out of it! Use your head! Even if he were "true" to you, he'd be pure poison as a husband.

So quit worrying about whether he's cheating on you or not, and begin to worry about what kind of a life you'd lead if you did manage to drag him to the altar.

Do you want to marry a man who thinks of himself first, last and all the time? Do you want to marry one who'll let you carry all the burdens, pay all the rent, buy all the groceries, while he loafs and spends all the money he manages to corner on himself?

If that's what you want, go to it! It's your own funeral.

But if you have an atom of respect for yourself, or the slightest hope for happiness, cut out this "bad habit" of yours pronto.

"AUTUMN—POOR GIRL"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Clad in grey-blue smoke of fall fires and the fading glory of dying leaves, drawing her furs closer and closer, autumn walks like a lost young nymph in the tattered woods. But to me even her rustling, ragged raiment, her pensive quietude, her look of coldness under a cold sky, autumn is a lady of glory. Her rags are gold and scarlet, her hair is russet red. She may be a lonesome lady—but she is not a sad one to me.

Sighs and moods, frosts, autumn moons are her setting. Witches ride, Jack-o-lanterns dodge behind the beeches and glare yellowly. The owl, the black cat, the rustling shocks of corn are her weird companions. Her young lover, like Venus' Adonis—summer—is dead. The sound of acorns pattering down, the wind in the bare branches, and the last bird going South is the only music besides her own cautious feet.

And yet she is not melancholy! She is beautiful—bedraggled—blazing, big-eyed over her pumpkins and witches and owls, as the children are. She has a magic. . . .to me she is the most enchanting of all the seasons—the time when my spirit climbs the highest, and sings the loudest. NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Form of 'Regret'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When you refuse an invitation of a young man, which is the correct form to use:

I'm sorry, but I cannot accept your invitation.

I'm sorry I can't accept. Thank you so much anyway.

A says it is for him to thank me, but I feel as though we both should thank each other.

If neither form is correct, or if you have a better one, please write it. A FRIEND.

Let's talk over and try to analyze these forms.

Your first form . . "I'm sorry, but I cannot accept your invitation" . . . seems too uncompromisingly worded, too frigid, to use for the usual "regret." The second form . . . "I'm sorry I can't accept. Thank you so much anyway" . . . is a bit more gracious, but I don't like that "anyway." "Thank you so much for asking me" is what you really wish to say, and what you really should say.

No matter how you word your form of "regret," you should thank the young man for his invitation. The friend who says that this is not necessary just doesn't know manners, and just hasn't a correctly-placed or correctly-developed sense of appreciation.

Of course it is more gracious to give a reason why we can't accept an invitation, especially one given by word of mouth. If we don't do this, naturally the inviting person immediately feels that we don't want to accept the invitation. In other words, we first say whether or not we can accept the invitation. If we can't accept it, we give the reason why we can't. And, in both cases, whether we accept or decline, we thank the person for the invitation.

"I'm so sorry that I can't go. I'm going to the theater on Tuesday evening. Thank you so much for asking me . . . It was most kind of you." This is about the formula . . . changed to suit the occasion.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Because a woman was born plain is no reason why she should stay that way. Not when she can buy beauty by the yard—lovely fabrics with which to drape the feminine frame—and dip synthetic complexions out of jars and bottles. That ugly ducklings are transformed into swans is no fable; it is being done every day. Smart attire, vitality, health, animation, good nature form a composition so charming and compelling that it outshines mere prettiness. In fact, many a chic lady doesn't want to look pretty. She would rather appear distinguished, carry the role of an outstanding personage, creating her own special kind of loveliness. When you meet one of her type, you remember her.

Few women wear stockings that are as large as they should be. They should be of such ample width that toes can move comfortably. Huddling toes together results in all manner of foot ills—corns, ingrowing nails, even hammer toe.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

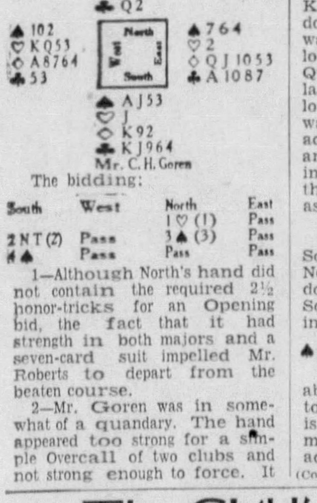
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Brilliant Bidding

The rules governing bidding are not rigid. The expert player knows them, but he also knows when to deviate from them. Because of the ever-changing situations which confront the player at the Bridge table, for the most part, unless he can see a good reason for deviation from an accepted standard, he should bid along conventional lines, but there are many exceptions to the rule which the good player will almost instinctively find.

An example of accurate diagnosis of a situation is shown in the hand below, in which Mr. W. Roberts and Mr. C. H. Goren were the North and South partners in a Duplicate game in the Franklin Bridge Club in Philadelphia.

North—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1♡ (1)	Pass
2NT (2)	Pass	3♠ (3)	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Although North's hand did not contain the required 2½ honor-tricks for an Opening bid, the fact that it had strength in both majors and a seven-card suit impelled Mr. Roberts to depart from the beaten course.

2—Mr. Goren was in somewhat of a quandary. The hand appeared too strong for a simple Overcall of two clubs and not strong enough to force. It also seemed undesirable to bid one spade, because of the misinformation it might convey along distributional lines. Weighing all these situations, Mr. Goren decided that the best bid was two notrump.

3—A brilliant but sound bid. Mr. Roberts reasoned that if he bid three hearts and South then bid three notrump, he could not bid four spades. Hence his decision to bid a four-card suit before rebidding a seven-card suit. While apparently an exception, it was strictly in accord with the correct principles of bidding, considering the situation which confronted the player.

The play was equally accurate, and resulted in the making of five spades. The diamond Queen was opened and ruffed by the Declarer. The Queen of clubs was then led from the closed hand, and East won with the Ace. East led another diamond, which North ruffed. The King of spades was then laid down, a club returned, which was won with the King, and a low club led and ruffed with the Queen of trumps. North now laid down the Ace of hearts, following with a low heart which was trumped in Dummy. The adverse spades were then drawn, and a diamond trick conceded in the end, making not only the contract, but an overtrick as well.

Today's Question

East, Dealer, bid four clubs, South passed, West passed, North bid four spades, East doubled and South passed. Was South correct in passing, holding, holding the following:

♠ — ♡ J 10 9 8 7 4 ◇ K 9 8 6 5 4 3 ♣ —

Answer—A hand such as the above cannot be bid according to any known regulations. It is entirely a matter of judgment and knowledge of your adversaries.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Underwood Is Joined by Two Detectives

"Your question is not only pardonable but natural." Harry Underwood told Dr. Barnes, "and I can answer it fully. You are to be one of the few people to know that my wife and I for years have been connected with a peculiar organization, a secret government diplomatic service which works so much under cover that frequently its own members do not know each other's identity. Mrs. Graham's father was formerly its head, and since, his opinions as consultant are greatly valued.

"Both Mr. and Mrs. Graham at times have also rendered valuable service to the country through this organization. Because of it, we shall be able to deal with this problem, I hope, without any aid from the police, and we count on avoiding any publicity whatever."

Across the harassed face of Dr. Barnes passed the first look of relief I had seen there; but he held up his hand deprecatingly.

"I have already told you," he said, "that I do not want you to consider us in the least."

"We are not," Mr. Underwood declared coolly, "except as we are considering ourselves. We do not wish publicity for these girls, any more than you do for the school, and with any luck, we can avoid it.

"Two of our most trusted operatives will be here before daylight. I want you to take a good look at them, and if you recognize them again as they mingle with the people of Sackettsville, I will give your school a hundred dollars to be used as you think best.

"One of them will scrape an acquaintance with this Jenkins, for they will apparently have legitimate business in the village. Inside of half an hour Wynne will have Jenkins turned inside out as neatly as if he were a glove."

HOTEL SUGGESTED

"You can't imagine how you hearten me," Dr. Barnes said. "For hours I have been feeling as if we were facing a blank wall. Is there anything else you wish to ask or to do before your men come?"

"No. The hardest task we have is to face these hours before we can begin active work; but we must find some place where we can stay."

"Oh! But you must stay right here," Dr. and Mrs. Barnes exclaimed together.

Lillian put up her hand as if some one had aimed a blow at her.

"I could not bear it," she said. "To see the girls — Marion's mates——"

"I know," Mrs. Barnes said quickly, soothingly, "and you do not need to see them. There is a wonderful little hotel in the village——"

"We stopped there last year," I interjected.

There was the sound of motors in the driveway and Lillian started to her feet, but Dr. Barnes motioned her back.

"I have to' the watchman to send everyone around to the private side entrance," he said. "Otherwise, the presence of cars standing in the front driveway here might cause comment from belated passersby, as the school is always dark at this hour. I will bring anyone in here."

He started for the door, and Harry Underwood and Dicky followed him closely.

DETECTIVES ARRIVE

But our anxiety lasted only for a minute. At the end of that interval our men came back with two others whom Lillian greeted cordially, and who were were immediately introduced to the rest of us as Mr. Wynne and Mr. Brock. Both were middle-aged, both of medium height, both had the indefinable look which comes to the trained trackers of men. But Brock was stocky, with sandy hair scarcely touched with gray, while Wynne was slight, with black hair distinctly silvered.

"You must have made record time," Lillian commented.

"Well; we both stepped on the gas a bit," Wynne said modestly, and Brock's face held a reminiscent grin that spoke eloquently of the speed with which they had come to our aid.

"You're here; that's the main thing," Mr. Underwood said warmly. "Now sit down, and we'll go over this thing—if we may." He looked at Dr. Barnes.

"Why! Of course. You know—"

But what other speech was on the good doctor's lips we never knew. From the hall outside came the sound of shattering glass, and the fall of something on the floor just outside the door of the room in which we were sitting.'

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Never Self-Prescribe for Digestive Trouble

I had occasion the other day to use a public telephone in a drug store. While waiting for my number I watched the luncheon counter and its busy patrons. Men and women hastily bolted huge bites of sandwich and quickly swallowed their coffee. Others added tempting and rich-looking desserts to their meal. I could not help but wonder how many of these busy persons would suffer from some digestive disturbance before their day's work was finished.

Dr. Copeland

Heartburn, dyspepsia, acid or sour stomach are common complaints. These digestive disturbances can be traced to our modern mode of living. Hurrying through meals, improper chewing of food and eating foods difficult to digest are bad habits that lead to indigestion and poor health.

Many centuries ago Aristotle, a wise old Greek, said: "Man does not die, he kills himself." A modern philosopher has said that people "Dig their graves with their teeth."

To insure good digestion of food it is necessary to slowly and carefully chew food before swallowing it. Slow chewing enables the saliva to act upon the food and prepare it for digestion in the stomach. If the food is improperly chewed and quickly swallowed, digestion is made more difficult.

Severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion have been cured by slow and careful eating of food. Heartburn can often be cured when haste and emotional excitement are avoided at mealtime.

Contrary to a common belief, heartburn is not a complaint or symptom of heart disease. It is caused by pressure of the stomach against the heart and can be traced to over-eating or rapid eating. It may follow eating some particular food. It is a danger signal and should be heeded.

The symptoms of indigestion that I have mentioned may be due to an organic disease or to some functional disturbance of the digestive tract. These cases require a complete physical examination by a physician. It may be necessary to resort to X-ray examinations to determine the source of the disturbance.

Often infected and diseased teeth may cause digestive trouble. The teeth should be examined. Infected and decayed teeth should be removed.

Another common cause of indigestion often overlooked is the taking of certain coal-tar products for headaches, rheumatic pains and other discomforts. These drugs relieve the pain, but irritate the sensitive and delicate lining of the stomach. Never do any self-prescribing. Talk with your doctor.

Answers to Health Queries

Miss Helene H. Q.—How can I gain weight? 2—I am 15 years old, 5 feet tall, what should I weigh?

A—Eat plenty of good nourishing food, including milk, cream, fresh fruits and vegetables, sleep as many hours as possible. Exercise regularly in the open air and practice deep breathing. Take cod liver oil as a general tonic. 2—You should weigh about 107 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of your age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A new partnership for winter coats is that of woolen, satin and fur. A coat of red velvety woolen has a bolero, collar and cuffs of fine black sealskin. Around the waist, black satin is inserted and the inset continues as a sash that ties at the side.

An easy look into the mirror is now obtainable with a new handbag. It has an ornamental lock at the center top which is really the top of a mirror that slides into a special grove between the leather and lining.

Of course you'll buy at least one bag for informal evening costumes. A grand new one is of black rough satin and is lined with quilted velvet in pale salmon color. There is a pendant ornament of strass and baroque pearls.

Walk softly in the new velvet evening shoes. A shoe for dinner wear is on the popular opera last and is of black velvet. It has a black grosgrain piping, and on the vamp are eyelet decorations of silver laced together with grosgrain.

The Child's Talents

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

There is a colossal temptation, when we have a child in the home, to utterly possess him, to manipulate him for our own satisfaction rather than for his own good. And the more conscientious we are in our attitude toward him and his future the more easily we fall into the temptation of feeling satisfied when he does something WE have wanted to do—something WE feel should be gratifying to him. Yet in the long run, under thoughtful analysis, it is OURSELVES we are projecting into the child's desires and activities, not the child himself.

Have you observed your child's aptitudes for various types of work and play and figured out the line in which he will be most interested and will excel, or have you merely tried to gain satisfaction by molding him into a miniature of what YOU would like to be? It is worth thinking about.

Do you, as a father, praise son for athletic prowess because as a boy you had to get down to work too early and were denied sports? Maybe son has no ambition to shine at football. Maybe huge muscles give him much less satisfaction than a theme well worked out, well executed.

Do you, as a mother, insist that daughter become an accomplished musician because you like music and were denied a musical education?

Give your child a chance to live his own life—and by that I don't mean uncontrolled activities—I mean a chance to develop the talents he has, not the ones you have and have been unable to nurture and bring into bloom. Cultivate your own if possible, but don't cultivate them through your children.

Household Hints

Upholstery on chairs can be cleaned with hot bran, rubbed on with a clean flannel.

New lace curtains and sheets will wash much easier if soaked overnight in strong salt water.

Lemons may be kept fresh and good for a month if placed on clean sheets of white writing paper and covered over with glass tumblers.

ADDITIONAL SPORTING NEWS

PITT, NEBRASKA IN SPOTLIGHT OF NATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Back to the football wars tramped the nation's leading college elevens today in another drive aimed at clarifying sectional and national rankings.

Pittsburgh-Nebraska, Michigan-Chicago, Purdue-Iowa, Tennessee-Vanderbilt, Florida-Auburn, Colgate-Syracuse, Brown-Columbia, Southern California-Oregon and Utah-Denver, these were the prime pairings so far as championship hopes were concerned. A dozen or more others were at least as important on traditional grounds.

Pittsburgh's pile-driving Panthers, undefeated so far in their quest for national honors, were favored over Nebraska, but were not expected to come close to the 40-0 trouncing they handed the Cornhuskers a year ago.

BROWN IN BIG TEST

Michigan and Purdue, sole contenders for the Big Ten crown, were heavily favored against Chicago and Iowa respectively, while Southern California, Utah, Auburn and Colgate also were decisive public choices in the Far West, Rocky Mountain, South and East, respectively.

The Tennessee-Vanderbilt and Brown-Columbia contests, involving as they did four undefeated teams, were rated as the nearest things to toss-ups on the program.

On traditional grounds, none could approach the meeting between Yale and Princeton which found the Tigers favored to avenge last year's 51-14 beating. Cornell-Dartmouth, Harvard-Holy Cross, Fordham-New York University, Lehigh-Rutgers and Temple-Penn State were other important battles in the East.

PENN FACES ORDEAL

The intersectional angle, cut to a minimum as most teams tackled foes in their own bailiwick, was furnished not only by Pitt and Nebraska, but by Penn and Ohio State; Army and North Dakota State, Maryland and Navy, West Virginia and Washington and Lee and Villanova and Detroit.

The Southwest Conference shot most of its bolt yesterday as Texas Christian virtually clinched the title by beating Texas, 14-0, while Rice, only other possible contender, was beaten by Texas A. and M., 14-7. This left Southern Methodist and Arkansas holding the conference spotlight all by themselves today.

Knockouts Feature Philadelphia Bouts

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Al Ettore, youthful Philadelphian, won a 10-round decision over Frankie Cawley, of Pittston, in the feature bout of a boxing card last night. Ettore weighed 181½, Cawley 183.

Eddie Houghton, Philadelphia light-heavyweight, scored a third-round knockout over Buddy Roberts, of the United States Marine Corps, in their scheduled 8-round semi-final. Roberts, weighing 167½, was down twice for counts of nine before the final blow, once in the second round, and again in the third.

Joe Mandarano, 158¾, defeated Yonder McLoughlin, 163½; Chick De Marco, 163¾, knocked out Joe Lynn, 167½, in the first round, and Ted Ivins, 173, scored a second-round knockout over John O'Tarras, 182.

New Law Forces Turks to Pick Family Names

STANBUL, Turkey, Nov. 12.—(AP.)—Millions of Turks were racking their brains today to choose family names for themselves while the minister of interior prepared a law to enforce this latest western reform.

Any names may be chosen as long as they are consistent with Turkish customs.

Heretofore family names have been non-extant in Turkey, thousands of women being simply "fatimas" and thousands of men "mustaphas" or "husseins." Sometimes men have added names indicating they are the sons of a six-fingered man or a fishmonger—just for distinction.

Names must be chosen within six months after promulgation of the new law.

Joyce Becomes More Like Her Father as She Grows Older

CHAPTER XXI.

Elizabeth turned and went out of the library. It was an odd thing about that room. She remembered that once a Christmas tree had stood there, in a corner near the hearth. Candles had burned on it, a silver star had guided the aspiring wings of an angel made of wax. She remembered the tree, she could almost see it now, as she turned back at the door. She remembered a room upstairs, a dark room.

She dragged herself up the steps and paused at the door of the nursery. The nursery had been Lennox's room. There Joyce lay in her white crib, kicking her bare, pink feet—her thumb was in her mouth, incorrigibly. Nanna, putting outdoor bonnets and coats away, straightened her strong old back and smiled at the girl in the doorway.

"She's just as good as gold, Miss Elizabeth. Come, see how she'll laugh if you but speak to her."

Elizabeth came, bent over the crib. Wide ignorant blue eyes stared up into hers. She leaned nearer; her hair slipping from the pins fell, a straight veiling of ashen gold. Joyce reached up dominant, acquisitive hands and pulled happily at the enchanting fleece.

"Nanna, how strong she is!"

"Yes—she's a handful." The old nurse chuckled and came to Elizabeth's side. "So like Master Lennox—so like. I remember the day—"

"It's late, Nanna. I must go—"

HURRIES FROM ROOM

Elizabeth turned, detached her hair from the hurting little fingers and left the room. She fled along the hall as if pursued by endless reminiscences.

Curious, to recall that once she had been avid to know what Lennox had been like as a baby—how he had looked, how smiled, what antics had been memorably his.

There, in the room she had quitted, lay his daughter in her crib, "so like." If only—thought Elizabeth, almost running—if only she had looked like me, I could endure it. If she looked like me perhaps she would let us go—she would hate her, too—

There were steps on the stairs. Elizabeth had reached her room, she opened the door, shut herself in.

Louisa entered the nursery.

"Did I hear Mrs. Sheldon in here just now?"

"Yes, m'am, she stopped by for a moment."

Louisa bent over the crib. The eyes so like his, the little tunnel of silky, dark hair, the curly, pink mouth, smiling. She picked the baby up in her arms, gently, almost casually, and sat down with her in a chair by the window. Nanna looked at her a moment—she could believe herself back, over 20 years. She stole silently from the room.

Louisa Sheldon regarded her grandchild. The baby laughed at her. Everything held laughter for Joyce.

No, not a feature, like the mother's. All Sheldon, all Lennox, search as she might.

Yet behind that rosy mask of infant flesh, deep in the unawakened eyes, would not Elizabeth wait, to surprise her? How much had Elizabeth contributed to this child? How much?

It would be eradicated thought Louisa, watched for.

If she had loved the father, her son, how painfully she loved his child. His—his flesh and blood. Of him. And yet not altogether his, hers too, child of that pale traitress, whose white skin and soft hands and characterless mouth had robbed Louisa's son of honor and herself, Louisa, of pride. If there was a mission left to her in the life she must live it was to guard this child from her heritage, to hold her close, so close and sheltered, so much her own, that nothing could touch her.

Lennox had been her own. She had lost him, for a little while. Then he had died, and she had found him again. This child she would make her own, this child she would keep.

This child would be a solace to her and a living weapon.

Joyce struggled a little as the arms which held her closed about her with an involuntary harshness. She whimpered a little, her face against that hard, flat breast.

Louisa relaxed her grasp, soothed the baby. Her true, unmusical voice, lifted, crooned. Nanna, hovering by the doorway, waited patiently.

FRIENDLY AND FEARLESS

There was nothing shy or timid about little Joyce Sheldon. But she was not a particularly precocious child, neither was she what her grandmother called, disapprovingly, "forward." It was simply that she was quite friendly and had no fear. Her first six years were occupied in eating, sleeping, growing and exploring. She was possessed by a most insatiable curiosity. Sturdy, healthy, not susceptible to the distresses and discomforts of childhood, she nevertheless engineered a series of accidents, quite cheerfully. A bruised knee, a cut thumb, a burned finger, even in her first year at school, a broken arm, she endured with stoicism and interest. She was gallant under pain, and extraordinarily taken by the apparent omnipotence of medical men. A day or two after her arm had been set she lay in bed, her little body plumply outlined under the sheets, her dark hair scattered over the pillows. Her grandmother sat beside her, concluding the reading aloud of a children's story.

"Grandmother!"

"What is it, Joyce?"

"When I grow up I'm going to be a doctor."

Mrs. Sheldon smiled. The child was always surprising her into a silent amusement.

"Women do not go into the medical profession."

Joyce bounced in her bed, said "Ouch!" more or less automatically, and turned eager eyes to her grandmother's.

"Oh, yes," she contradicted serenely. "'Scuse me, Grandmother, but they do. Miss Howells was telling me—her sister's one."

JOYCE ARGUES

Miss Howells was the nurse who had been called in, who at the moment was taking her hours off duty.

"It is unusual, nevertheless," Mrs. Sheldon informed her grandchild—she never talked down to Joyce—"and women doctors have not the standing of men. That means, they are not as highly considered, as looked up to. They never will be. Furthermore, it is hardly a profession open to gentlewomen."

"Don't want to be a gentlewoman!" muttered Joyce.

Mrs. Sheldon spoke severely.

"I am afraid you cannot help it."

There was a hesitating step at the door. Elizabeth looked in.

"May I——?"

She entered, sat down a little removed from the bedside, reached out to touch her daughter's hair with a slow, light hand.

"Is the pain very bad, dear?"

"No, Mother."

Mrs. Sheldon surveyed her daughter-in-law. It impressed her as almost indecent, this aura of pale youth which she carried with her. Of course Elizabeth was young, only 28, but there was something about her—Mrs. Sheldon cast about in her ordered mind for the correct term and settled, rather ironically grim, upon virginal. Yes, Elizabeth had matured into immaturity. Slim, blonde, a little colorless, a trifle remote, a saint on a picture postcard.

Elizabeth continued to question her child with a sort of wistful courtesy. She viewed Joyce as from a great distance. Her child—she had carried her in anguish, borne her in agony—her's. Yet she had never been able to feel any sense of possession. Perhaps one didn't, or was it because she, Elizabeth, lacked something? Or because of this interposition between them, this other woman to whom Joyce ran with all her little exigencies?

Joyce was charming with her mother. Yet with the wholly unconscious mimicry of childhood she had picked up a shadow of her grandmother's attitude toward her. Joyce was never naughty with her mother, never answered back; treated her with a childish chivalry. Any battles that Joyce fought in her pursuit of happiness were waged with the older woman. They were good enough friends for that, thought Elizabeth bitterly.

Presently she made some excuse and left them; she could not bear to be with them for any length of time. It hurt so intolerably to witness the companionship from which she was barred; to realize how futile she was, how ineffectual. A real woman, she told herself a thousand times, would assert herself, demand her rights in the child.

When the door had closed behind her mother, Joyce turned to Louisa and resumed the attack.

"But I want to be a doctor!"

She liked arguing with her grandmother. They rarely agreed but—well, there it was. Her grandmother always had time for her, always an explanation, a contradiction or an answer. Never, in all her little life had Joyce taken a problem to her mother. As quick as all intelligent children to pick up undercurrents she knew quite well how unimportant her mother was in the household, how, as it were, on sufferance.

She and grandmother had secrets from mother.

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Sheldon, aristocratic widow, who idolizes her son, Lennox, above all things else on earth, is arranging details of his wedding to Elizabeth Howland. Mrs. Sheldon in secret decided to marry off Lennox to some nice girl more than two years before when he attended a party where giddy girls of no social standing had made merry with the boys. Mrs. Sheldon took command of wedding plans and sent Elizabeth home to visit her family for a few months. Lennox goes to Boston to see Elizabeth. They decide to elope, but Louisa spoils their plans. Louisa orders an almost immediate marriage and rushes the wedding plans. Lennox gets a cold and after the wedding ceremonies he becomes very sick. He dies of pneumonia within two days. Elizabeth continues to live with Louisa. While they are touring Europe Elizabeth becomes the mother of an infant daughter.

Now Go On

"I don't want to be a gentlewoman!" muttered Joyce.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Boys who are members of the Cameraphone Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club who would like to play football on the Cameraphone football team should report to Manager Earl Roeser today at the Cameraphone Theater.

This information was given out by Betty Niedhammer, "official junior reporter" of the Cameraphone Chapter, yesterday. She also states that the first game will be played on Thanksgiving Day.

Today every theater where the Junior Komic Club met was filled to capacity with happy, carefree youngsters and at each of the meetings they enjoyed more than two hours of good clean wholesome fun and entertainment.

'LARGEST MEETING'

Manager J. O. Hooley, of the Sheridan Square reported that he had the largest number of children at the Sheridan Square since he took over the management of that theater.

This meeting today, you know, was the first regular meeting of the Sheridan Square Chapter of the Junior Komic Club. This club has been meeting at the Enright since the organization of the club, but due to the type of pictures that have been booked into the Enright, the management thought it best to move the club to the Sheridan Square, where the members could enjoy more pictures of the Tom Mix and Buck Jones type. Pictures more of the cowboy and Indian variety, which the members seem to like.

The Schenley today had several acts from the Vera Liebau School of Dancing, plus the Schenley Junior Komic Club Orchestra and the newly-organized orchestra of Jack White, and as O. O. McIntyre, famous columnist of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph would say, "an Oakland boy who made good in a big way." Because the members shouted and whistled for more of Jack's music.

AMBRIDGE CHAPTER

At the Ambridge the youngsters were entertained by the pupils from the Mann School of Dancing. Libby Wolfe was mistress of ceremonies and introduced the following boys and girls to the members:

Jimmy Brown, Dolores Seyboth, Marcia Mann, Sarah Barklet, Mary Virginia Bunger, Joan Dumeyer, Marie Simon, Jean Smith, Ethel Seasar, Frances Gentis, Mary Pass, Betty Jane Hickey, Dorthea Mann, Margaret Antonelli, Jean Knuass.

Each of the youngsters did a specialty number and the final number was by the complete cast.

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed to you.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

Congratulations to the following boys and girls, all members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, who are celebrating their birthdays today:

Etna-Harris—Paul Berger, Lillian Eichdorn.

South Hills—James Armenti, Charles Tague, Walter Bowman, Natalia Tague, William De Haven, Franklin Guesser, Dorothy Fink.

Oldtime Election Bettors Gone

Police captured a political orator today in the Appalachian Range who couldn't stop talking. But a butterfly net over his head was an authority he could recognize.

They must handle him gently. A stump-speecher is a tough man to break of the habit. They are going to taper him off on a national hookup and gradually get him down to announcing trains in a railroad station.

He's just one of the bugs who flitter forth at every election. The rest of the time they hibernate quietly under stone bridges.

By the detour, what became of the freak election bets? Remember the oldtimers? My old man would bet your old man that if Cleveland didn't win he would trundle him up the main drag in a wheelbarrow. If your old man lost he would have to let his whiskers grow or stop stealing pigeons.

Another bet was to push a peanut up Pike's Peak with your nose. The oldtimers took their politics seriously because nobody ever heard a peanut cry quits.

It was a good way to get your name in the papers. We remember that my old man once wagered he would go over Niagara Falls in a barrel. The other bettor was to chin himself a hundred times on a live trolley wire. All the newspaper reporters rushed around to get the pictures of these two bitter partisans and found them cheating each other at cribbage.

They would have made the front page that day if a mule hadn't run away with a load of farm produce.

We're glad to say that few people bet that way these days. They realize that election day is more valuable as a holiday than as a milestone in history. Your man is either elected or defeated but the movies go on forever.

Now, we can lay back four more years and wait for the next campaign. We will get the same old speeches and the same old promises, but your old man and my old man won't be around making any astonishing bets. The elections are no longer personal affairs. They're just a big web spun over a vast territory and we can no more figure a citizen getting heated up over his candidate than we can visualize an Arkansas farmer tearing out the offending picture of a chair in a mail order catalogue.

*The impression created by the Senate Utilities In*vestigating Committee's preliminary activities that a thorough and honest inquiry was to be made is challenged by the committee's reluctance to issue subpenas, as requested by Oliver K. Eaton, its attorney, for the banking and brokerage records of members of the Public Service Commission and certain other persons.

*One of the main purposes of the inquiry is to estab*lish the truth or falsity of the charge that members of the commission under the old regime were bribed by public utilities companies. Some of the members of the commission have refused to submit their financial records. Under the circumstances there seems no alternative, if the investigation is to proceed, but to compel the production of the documents.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot and others have asserted that the committee is friendly to the individuals and companies under suspicion and that the outcome of the investigation would be a "whitewash." That opinion will be strengthened if the committee refuses to support Eaton's demand for subpenas. The effect, moreover, will be to undermine what remains of the public's confidence in the Republican state organization, which is believed to control the committee.

Co-operating with independent Republicans at the next session of the Legislature, the newly-elected Democratic members will have a fine opportunity to eliminate some of the evils that have been foisted upon the state by the Republican machine. Chief among these evils is the power that has been given to the public utilities to oppress the people with unfair rates.

Joseph Guffey, Democratic leader in Pennsylvania, conferred with President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt Thursday, which is a reminder that there are a number of important federal positions in Pittsburgh that will be placed in new hands after March 4. If Mr. Guffey is wise he will put fitness for the office above services to the Democratic party in making recommendations.

There is one federal job in particular in which ability of a high order is required, the job of United States District Attorney. There should be careful weighing of the merits of the candidates for this position. In filling the postmasterships, too, Mr. Guffey would do well to inquire into the administrative ability of applicants. Much more is necessary than that they shall have been good Democrats.

It was hinted by local Republican leaders during the campaign that they were not very enthusiastic about the Hoover administration because most of the juicy federal plums in Western Pennsylvania had been given to residents of other counties. Allegheny County received slight recognition. While this county should not have a monopoly of the patronage, it should not be ignored. After all, 14 per cent of the people of Pennsylvania live in Allegheny County.

It is to the pecuniary advantage of the aldermen and justices of the peace to encourage and foment prosecutions, because even when the cases are dismissed they collect fees from the county. This item of the county expenses is costing the taxpayers about $129,000 a year, according to an auditors' report that has been filed with the County Commissioners.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, who was for some years an alderman himself, asserts that "fining squires" and "roving constables" are preying on the county, and "a lot of them ought to be in jail." They have, however, as McGovern pointed out, a strong political organization, and it is likely to be a difficult task to persuade the Legislature to change the lucrative system under which they operate.

The auditors' report concerning payments to the minor judiciary has been referred to the county legal department, and it is expected that Special Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher will give an opinion as to what is the proper legislative remedy for the evils complained of. If he goes into the subject deeply enough Mr. Lesher will find, we believe, that many of the squires are doing business illegally.

Mr. Lesher might find it worth while to refer to the case of Tumey v. Ohio, which he will find reported in 273 U. S. Reports, page 510. That is a United States Supreme Court decision which asserts that an alderman, justice of the peace or other petty magistrate has no right to pass judgment in a criminal case in which he will personally profit by a verdict of guilty.

Another way in which the petty magistrates abuse their authority is by assuming jurisdiction and passing judgment themselves on liquor, gambling and commercial vice cases. The law requires that if a prima facie case is presented in support of charges involving such offenses the defendants shall be held for the grand jury. The magistrates do not exculpate themselves by making the charge in such cases "suspicious person" or "disorderly conduct."

*Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh has directed the in*spectors to close the speakeasies, gambling houses and other illegal resorts. No doubt he acted at the instigation of Mayor Charles H. Kline. One theory is that the lid has been clamped down in punishment of the underworld's failure to help the city Republican machine in the election Tuesday.

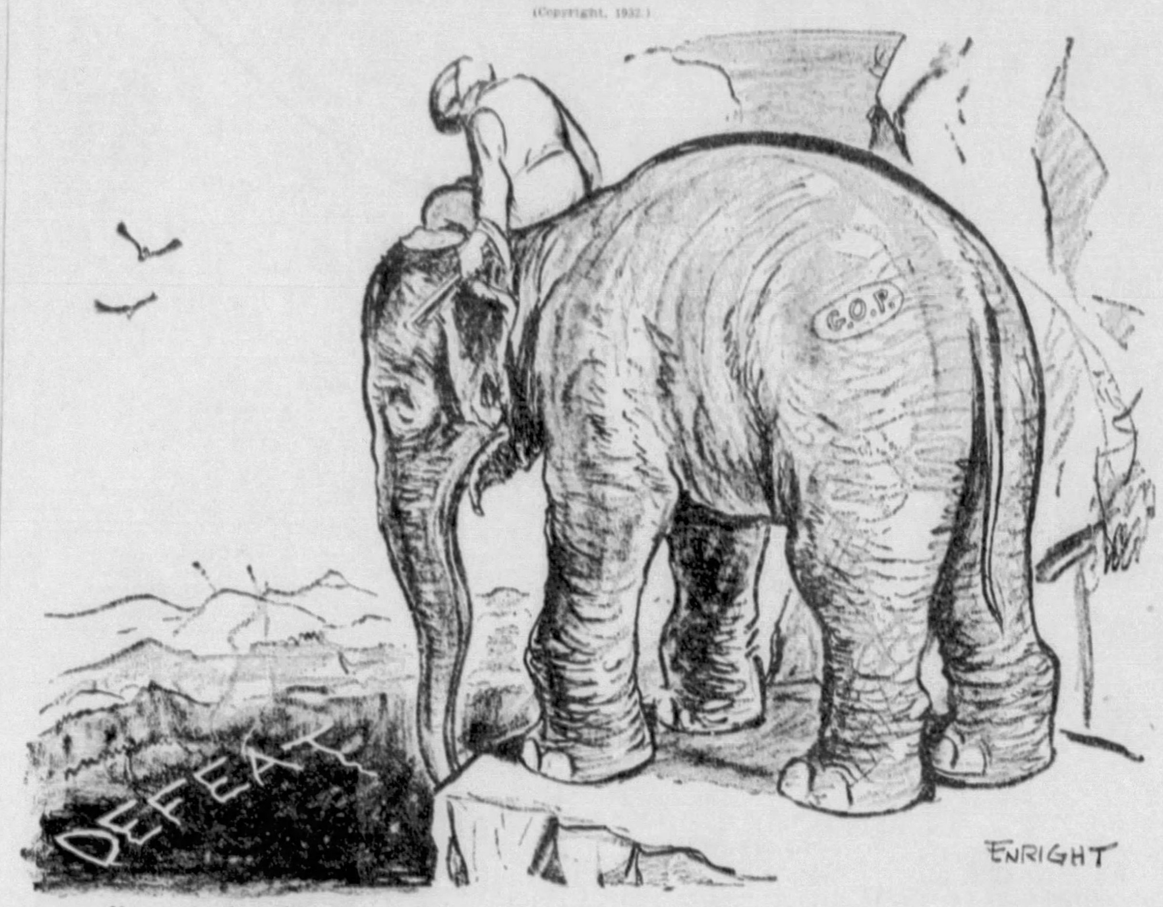
Another, and more plausible, theory is that the move was prompted by a desire to take the wind out of the sails of Judge Frank P. Patterson, who has been publicly mentioned as a mayoralty possibility next year, and in anticipation of a grand jury investigation of vice in Pittsburgh. But could it be that Mayor Kline is actuated by a sincere desire to clean up the city for no other reason than to promote the welfare of the people?

Killing frost has been late this year, and many persons have had flowers in their gardens up until now. The chrysanthemums have been particularly attractive. The chrysanthemum show at the Phipps Conservatory is a gorgeous affair. A fine photograph of it is reproduced in the Gravure Section of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Another autumn scene in the section is of men at work in a corn crib on a Somerset County farm.

A new serial, "The Justice of the Desert," by Joan Kennedy, starts in the American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Among the many interesting and copiously illustrated articles is one dealing with the mystery of the legendary man-eating tree of Madagascar.

At the End of the Trail

(Copyright, 1932.)



Now comes the ending of the trail
And no detour in sight;
The golden shafts of sunset fail
And mingle with the night.
Although it makes him fret and squirm
To see the far lights burning,
The Pachyderm is not a worm,
And so there is no turning.

Time was the road lay smooth and mild
By meadowland and vale,
And then the Pachyderm went wild
And wandered off the trail.
And now he looks afar and groans
Amid the shadows drear,
And asks himself in hopeless tones:
"Where do we go from here?"

Demand for Federal Control Alters Stock Exchange Strategy

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

THE Senate's investigation into stock exchange practices and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's demand for stock exchange reform in his Columbus (O.) address are beginning to bear fruit.

Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, has begun to change his tune somewhat.

Instead of continuing to make a blanket apology for things as they are at the speculative whirlpool, Mr. Whitney devoted a part of his speech at St. Louis to a review of the evils of market rigging.

In committing himself to the need of improvement in practices affecting dealings in securities, Mr. Whitney made the nationwide demand for a better deal in Wall street virtually unanimous.

PURPORTING to distinguish between good pools, which are simply merchandising agencies, and objectionable pools, Mr. Whitney pointed out:

"There have been, of course, nefarious pools where large purchases were made in anticipation of the publication of unduly optimistic or other unwarranted statements about the company's prospects. The exchange has consistently opposed operations of this kind. We feel that they are a form of fraud which should be prevented . . .

". . . The exchange recognizes that the existence of very large pools, and particularly pools in which company officials participate, may induce breaches of trust . . . Some corporate officials have been false to their trust and have put their personal advantage above their duty to stockholders. The exchange deeply deplores this fact . . .

"The real remedy for this evil lies not with the exchange, but with stockholders."

MR. WHITNEY then alluded to the evils of false rumors and inspired reports.

He also referred to abuses of specialists in connection with pools, and indicated that the stock exchange was considering forbidding such participation in pools by specialists, their partners and their firms.

In the light of the experience of the American public in the security markets in the last three years, Mr. Whitney could hardly have conceded less, especially in view of the fact that specific cases of such abuses were revealed factually before the Senate investigating committee.

Mr. Whitney's candor is doubtless intended as an astute maneuver to keep the privilege of unregulated self-rule for the stock exchange, in the face of the demand by Gov. Roosevelt and numerous others for stringent federal regulation of the security markets.

Marry-Go-Round

What Price Success?

Why didn't the Lord make all women sweet and placid—beautiful and dumb?

Why does any girl, whose one fond hope is to be happily married, spend her days cultivating her mind and her personality? Or working for fame or success?

Why is the average girl so passionately bent on "expressing herself," when her only hope of getting a capable, he-man husband and being happily married, hangs on her power to REPRESS herself?

Some women of course were born for a career, and would never have been happily married, anyhow. But the price that a girl pays for success is far greater than she bargains for.

Men may like to be seen about with a successful woman, and to bask in her reflected radiance. A woman who is full of pep, originality, ideas and efficiency may be the life and light of a dinner party and a fascinating pal. Every man may admire her, just as he admires a fireworks display.

But, what he wants to come home to, every evening, after a strenuous day, is something soothing, quiet and unobtrusive, who will serve as a back-drop and act as understudy and applause—from the ushers. A "yes-woman," who will give him the limelight.

He may look for vivacity, sparkle and mental stimulation in the women he meets, when he goes out; but what he looks for in the woman who meets him at the front door is placidity, serenity and pliability. Before marriage, his pulse may beat to a high tempo—but after marriage he longs for a lullaby.

Ever notice how so many happy wives of successful men remind you of those pliant flat felts that can be bent, shaped, and molded to fit the head—and the imagination? It took long years of self-control and self-effacement to make them like that—unless they were BORN beautiful and dumb.

Nothing is so attractive and flattering to a man, in any woman, as simple nothingness! Nothing at all inside—and nothing much outside!

Nothing for him to live up to or look to—and nothing to distract his attention from his work. Nothing to bore him—and nothing to excite him.

Nothing to make him think after a hard day at the office—and nothing to draw his attention from his morning newspaper.

Nothing to get on his nerves, nothing to worry him— and nothing to fill him with an inferiority complex.

Why didn't the Lord make ALL women sweet and insipid—beautiful and dumb?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—This is my hour—locked in the bathroom to dawdle over a morning shave. The only way they can get to me is with tear gas. Right through here I don't look unlike Warren Williams. Wonder if anyone ever wrote an essay on shaving? The languid sweep of a glittering...

Some fat-head is knocking now. They'll talk through the keyhole, or not at all. O, a gentleman to see about the monkey cage, is it? They have likely been shaving him up for this save—I mean saving him up for this shave. Ready for the first stroke, and the monkey cage man arrives.

Well, the monkey is in the Bronx Zoo now, and the back of my hand to him. I don't like that magnifying mirror. It makes me look a bum. My face is all pores. And are my eyes rhuemy! A fire wagon. Hey, down there, you kid on a bicycle! Where's the fire? I say where's—aw, what's the use!

I'll just stand at this window awhile and inhale. The iced breath from the harbor. Look, the lady across the street yanks down her shade. She needn't be so over-the-river. I'm still in the lower sections of my pajamas. I can gaze out my own window. Wonder how many times I can touch the floor with my fingers?

I went to 26, anyway. But it's silly. I believe I overdid it, at that. The lady is looking out the window, again. A glance at my shoulder, and they all go balmy. The original What-a-Man! I wonder if the lady would care to see me throw the discuss some day.

The phone is ringing. She's probably asking me over to tea. I'll act lit'ry. So good of you. Jolly, quite, and all that, but I'm in the clutch of creation. What's that! They are phoning to pull down the blinds or they'll call the police. They are, are they? Is that so?

Funny about that hoot-nanny on my neck. No bigger than a pin head, but it's been there since I was in kilts. Did I cute the girls when I wore kilts! Remind me to show you the pictures. But about that doo-hickey. I might as well shave it off. One snip and pouf! Steady, remember your Viking ancestry. There it goes. Note how calm I am. I'll even whistle.

It bleeds a little but I'm free of my wen. Wen you're away. I remember wen. See, dripping with blood, he's always clowning. I'm tired of whistling. I'll sing. "Many brave hearts are asleep in the deep, so beware, bee-w-a-r-e!" Is that going downstairs? Nothing lathers like this stuff Billy B. Van sent. I think I'll foam up my face, run out and scare the dogs. Still, I tried that once with a Santa Claus false face, and got bit through the ear. Hark, a neighbor is practising on a trombone. Wish he'd play "This is the Missus!" That ought to be a good shaving tune. Unless he hit a sour note. Then, I'd cut my throat.

That gogobos hasn't stopped bleeding yet. I'll touch it with alum. There! I don't mind the sting. Look, I'm standing on one foot and smiling. Wish I had nerve to raise—or is it rear?—sideburns. That'll bring letters they are Burnsides. I know—named for a general, yanh, yanh. The first time I've looked at my tongue since staying home nights. Aw, aw, aw! Nothing is comic as a palate. But they're important. Lose it and oo egin awk ike iss. That back stump holds on, but it's certainly leaning!

Somebod knocking again. Worse than a ris hotel. Maybe the lady acro the way wants to apologize. Na , madame, it's of no consequence. Everybody hands me the raspberry. I'm calloused. A minute, I'll lie down so you can walk on me. Life ever breaks thus for me. Crash, crash, crash, against granite reefs. That's enough poetry. Now for a dust of face powder, and I'm practically Clark's what's-his-name, ready for the boulevards. Strange, there's still a trickle of blood. Maybe that's why I feel weak. Start out for a peaceful shave, and wind up bleeding to death. I'll wait till I grow weaker and stagger out to fall at my wife's feet. Someone knocking again.

If I had to live over again I'd never shave. I'd use a blow torch, or have whiskers to my knees Meet the left Smith brother! There's a note under the door. It reads: "Breakfast is ready." It's from my wife. She never knocks. She understands me. She knows I'm a fool.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

My father had an enthusiasm for life.

And when one considers his experience, that was an amazing thing, for his personal experience was filled with pain and hardship.

He was always a poor man. For most of his years he was a sick man, suffering constantly. He never as far as I know, realized one of his dreams. And he must have had many dreams. He had a hungry mind, a gay, gypsy nature made for romance and adventure. But he was denied education or travel. Always he was bound by the struggle to support us, and the torturing effort to breathe.

I can see him yet, with a pity which will never diminish, standing on top of the hill where we lived, his body laboring painfully after the hard climb. Yet, even as he panted, his eyes were fixed in delight upon the sun-drenched bay which spread beneath us and the round, yellow hills, crouched like great, sleepy cats about the glittering blue water. So intense was that delight that it made his personal misery seem petty and apart.

And so great was that triumph that I never realized his suffering until he was gone. Then I saw the tragedy of his life. But to us, as children, there was always a heroic glamour about him. He always seemed, to us, a conqueror.

Never did a man have a greater enthusiasm for everything. Everything about the natural world—the play of light, the flow of water, the composition of the common earth—each problem became an engrossing adventure to him. Everything about human beings—their love and hate, their strength and weakness—stirred and excited him. He had a deep, unwavering sympathy for people. He literally made himself part of them. He was always ready to defend them. He flamed in magnificent fury against the evil powers which oppressed and took advantage of them.

And he did not merely feel enthusiasm; he lived it. After his long day's toil was over, he went down the hill again and worked until nearly midnight, teaching foreigners American history and the English language. To his death, he worked to set other poor men free.

And it was a joyous work. He wasn't working to save his soul. As far as I know, he never bothered about his soul nor professed any religion. He lived bravely and generously, simply because it was a delight to do so.

No day was ever long enough to hold all the things my father felt—all his curiosity and friendliness and enthusiasm and gorgeous rage.

He lived like a flame.

Yet, to a stranger's eye, he was shabby, and sick, and frustrated. But his spirit was never sick, or poor. That flame in him had melted all his shackles. It had set him free from personal pain and perplexity; released him, from his racked body, into infinite freedom and authority.

Always in thinking of the noble mystery of his life I remember one verse:

"HE WHO WOULD SAVE HIS LIFE SHALL LOSE IT, BUT HE WHO WILL LOSE HIS LIFE, SHALL SAVE IT."

My father lost his life. He died while he was young and, during his existence, he missed most of those things which men hold dear. But, by the very loss of his personal pleasure and profit, he gained that which is above all profit.

He attained a god's-eye view of men and their world. He proved, beyond all argument, that spirit can triumph over matter.

Often when I see other men surrendering—when I see myself surrendering, making excuses and alibis for my defeat—I think of him. No man ever faced greater handicaps, yet never did he admit that they were handicaps. He was too busy looking beyond himself to be concerned with himself. Why should he be concerned with his own flawed, finite existence, when he could become a part of that infinite, triumphant adventure of Life?

It was as if a man had the opportunity to choose between crutches and wings.

HE CHOSE WINGS!

CROQUET BACK

By Winifred Black

For goodness sake—croquet is back again! Regular, old-fashioned croquet, with the middle wicket and the striped post and everything.

Somehow, I can't see one of our new young women playing croquet.

Tennis; golf; basketball—why, yes, to be sure! Quite an athletic and I'm-as-good-as-you-are sort of thing, don't you know?

But, croquet? There are so few curates these days, and never a vicar, at all; so what are the girls going to do for men in a game of croquet?

Floppy hats; blue sashes; lockets with a lock of hair in them; pressed flowers, for memory; warblings at eve; "Father, dear Father, come home with me now; the clock in the steeple strikes one."

Church oyster suppers; sleigh rides in the old bobsled—with the moon on the snow, and the blue shadows of the trees, and the clip-clop, clip-clop of the horses' feet on the frosty road.

"Nita, Juanita; ask thy soul if we should part."

Who's that throaty tenor, up there in the front of the sled?

"Seeing Nellie Home"—let's see; how does that go?

rested; rested light as ocean
foam;
"And 'twas from Aunt Dina's quilting party, I was seeing Nellie home."

Sweet girl, that one in the little blue-knitted hood and blue mittens! I wonder which one she's really in love with, the tenor in the village quartet, or the young fellow studying law with his uncle, the judge?

The young lawyer has the most brains, of course, and there's his family influence behind him; but when the tenor lifts up the molten silver of his voice and tells the world that:

"Nothing is steadfast; nothing is true;
"But your love for me, and mine for you"—

it's really awfully hard to remember how queer the tenor acted about his mother when she lost her money; and you know how girls are about tenors.

"Farewell, my own; light of my life, farewell." You might know somebody would start that!

Mfh, mfh; sniff, sniff. This must be the farmhouse where we're going to stop for supper. I can smell the coffee and the fried oysters and the hot mince pie this very minute!

Why, the minister's here already—he and his wife and two rather plain daughters! They came out ahead in their own sleigh, bless their hearts! The minister's wife is awfully worried about that young rapscallion of a son of theirs. There's a girl from the next town you know. How the black eyes of that next-town girl do flash and sparkle in the moonlight!

I hope the minister will tell us some of those queer yarns of his about his father's early days in the Wisconsin woods, when the Indian Chief walked into his father's house and snatched up the pot of chicken on the stove, and walked out with it as calm as you please.

"'Twas a calm, still night,
"And the moon's pale light
"Shone soft o'er hill and dale."

Well, Lillie Vale, where did you come from all at once?

Croquet? Somehow, the new songs don't seem to go with croquet, do they?

"My friend Elizabeth, out of breath and scared to death."

Somehow, you just can't think of Friend Elizabeth—in her sport clothes and her bobbed hair and her cigaret case and lighter and everything—playing croquet, can you?

Foot on the ball, mallet in hand; dear, dear, how the ruffles and the sashes used to flutter! Well, I suppose they'll have new rules for the game now—rules that will make it all fast and furious, so the moderns can bear to play it.

"In the gloaming, Oh, my darling—"

Was that someone singing, back there in the old-fashioned parlor? We used to hear it from the croquet garden, long and long ago.
